300,000 Miners Out With Coal Stocks Low; 100,000 Packers Idle

Operators Ask Lewis to Agree To Court Solution Of Pension Issue

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

With three fourths of the Nation's soft-coal miners on strike, the operators yesterday proposed that John L. Lewis join them in seeking a court solution to their dispute over pensions.

Ezra Van Horn, spokesman for the owners, wrote the mine union leader to go with him before Friday to the Federal District Court. There they would ask that a neutral trustee of the miners' pension fund be appointed.

Van Horn wrote that if Lewis did not concur by that date, he would petition the court himself to make the appointment.

Federal Officials Worried

Lewis' office had no comment to make yesterday. Federal officials, studying the situation and gravely worried over what will shortly be an almost complete mine shutdown, had no plans for immediate action.

The Nation's stocks of coal above ground appeared to be dangerously low. March 1 figures are not available, but are thought to be less than the February 1 totals. These showed a 29 days' supply. Anything under 30 days is considered alarming.

By last night, 300,000 out of a total of 400,000 soft coal miners were away from their jobs.

The walkout followed a letter which Lewis sent to all union officials last Friday. He said the coal operators "dishonored" a contract they signed on July 8, 1947, by failing to agree on setting up a pension fund.

Van Horn Outlines Position

The fund, comprised of royalty payments of 10 cents on each ton mined, was to be administered under the contract by three trustees. One is Lewis, the second Van Horn, and the third was Thomas E. Murray of New York, acting as the neutral member. Murray resigned last January after failure to obtain an agreement on a pension plan.

Calling a press conference yesterday, Van Horn said he was willing at any time to meet with Lewis and try to come to an agreement. But he argued, in effect, that this was impossible without a third, neutral, trustee.

He said he submitted to Lewis a list of names of possible candidates shortly after Murray's resignation. Lewis, he went on, never gave a reply but went on a long vacation instead. A week ago, on Lewis' return, Van Horn said he met with him again, asking that he agree on the third member, and again received no satisfaction.

Van Horn pointed out that under

Truman Appoints Board of Inquiry To Report to Him On Meat Dispute

Acting under the "national emergency" provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act, President Truman yesterday named a three-man board of inquiry to look into the meat-packing strike.

He chose:

Nathan P. Feinsinger, a former member of the War Labor Board and now a law professor at the University of Wisconsin; Pearce Davis, chairman of the department of business and economics at Illinois Institute of Technology, and Walter V. Schaefer, professor at Northwestern University Law School.

Could Seek Injunction

Under the law, they are to make a written report of the issues involved in the walkout and the circumstances of the dispute. Then, if the President chooses, he may ask the Attorney General to obtain an injunction, to remain in force for a maximum of 80 days, prohibiting the strike.

It was freely predicted in Government circles yesterday that Mr. Truman will seek such an injunction. While it is in effect, the Government is required to make every attempt to settle the dispute.

Washington may begin to feel the effect of the strike by the end of next week, when meat is expected to become scarce, Sidney Kolker, chairman of the wholesale meat division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association said yesterday.

The strike, affecting 100,000 workers, 140 plants and about half of the country's meat production, began Monday. The union, the CIO Packinghouse Workers, rejected a last-minute appeal from the President to stay at work while the fact-finding inquiry ran its course.

Issue Is Wages

The issue is wages. The union's 'asking figure" was a 29-cents-an-hour increase; the packers' offer was 9 cents. The union proposed to accept the 9 and arbitrate over the rest, but the packers refused.

Picketing yesterday was generally peaceful. Police in Chicago, heart of the livestock slaughtering area, were prepared for violence, however.

Meat experts predicted that if the strike continues for more than two weeks, housewives would then find higher prices at the butcher shops.

Hog prices at Chicago jumped 50 cents to $1.25 a hundred pounds at the Chicago stockyards and cattle rose as much as 50 cents. In the Chicago wholesale market, beef gained as much as $2 a hundred pounds, lamb $1 to $2 and pork cuts from $1 to $3. Wholesale meat prices also rose in New York.

About 150,000 packinghouse workers are still on the job.

Fairfax School Bible Studies Continuing

Views of Virginia Attorney General Awaited on Ban

Fairfax County will continue its program of religious instruction in public schools until the State Attorney General has clarified the recent Supreme Court ruling.

The county school board took this position yesterday after discussing the matter. About 900 students in the fourth to seventh grades are now released from classwork one hour a week to take part in nondenominational religious study.

Permission Necessary

The work consists of Bible study and takes place in public school buildings. Instruction is by outside teachers. Permission of parents is necessary before a student may participate.

Another point in question is the county's practice of permitting the schools to be used during the summer for vacation Bible classes.

The board felt the court decision would not apply to opening morning exercises of the Lord's Prayer and Bible readings. However, it took no official action on any part of the issue.

Other Actions Taken

The board yesterday also:

(1) Voted to accept, subject to drawing final plans, a 10-acre site for an elementary school in the proposed community of Springfield. Owners, Carr, Inc., offered the tract on condition the school board help pay for construction of adjacent streets and sidewalks;

(2) Voted to purchase a four-acre tract at Tyler Park for an elementary school for the Tyler Park-Jefferson Village area.

House Votes Local Option Rent Control

Measure Must Go To Conference as Senate Approved Federal Authority

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

With the GOP machine in full control, the House last night voted to give home-town boards the supreme authority over rent controls—if the local board want them—until April 1, 1949.

Final vote for "local option" rent control, which removes veto power over rent increases from the hands of the Federal Housing Expediter, was 251 to 132.

House Democratic Leader Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.) termed the measure "the most reckless abdication of legislative authority that I have ever seen" but the steamroller crushed every attempt at change.

Voting 189 to 85, the House refused to recommit the bill to the House Banking Committee for further consideration. Ignored was a last-minute plea from the CIO to return the bill to committee.

Stop-Gap Control Now

Earlier, the House decided—135 to 83—not to substitute a Senate-passed measure for its own bill. The Senate recently voted to continue rent controls to May 1, 1949, leaving authority in the hands of the Federal expediter.

House and Senate measures now go to a conference of representatives of both bodies so that differences can be ironed out.

The Nation is now operating under a 31-day stopgap rent-control law which expires March 31. Under it Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods has been able to turn down all local board proposals for rent raises or decontrol except on proof they were necessary.

The provision to give local boards full power over rent increases was bitterly although futilely contested. Foes said many of the local boards are "stacked" with real estate operators and that Federal controls were necessary to hold rents down.

The District of Columbia has a separate rent control law and is not directly affected by this legislation.

Representative Mike Monroney (D., Okla.) who led the fight to maintain the Federal veto power over rent hikes predicted that in some areas rents will shoot up by 50 per cent if this bill becomes law.

Douglas Proposal Defeated

Monroney warned that the local option set-up is similar to that of the NRA which the Supreme Court ruled was an improper delegation of Federal powers.

Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Calif.) was defeated 117 to 29 in an attempt to extend rent controls to June 30, 1950, and roll back the so-called "voluntary" 15 per cent rent hikes made under last year's law.

Her measure would have included the District of Columbia.

ERP Counrties Vote Unanimously To Admit 3 Zones In Western Germany

Paris, March 16 (U.P.).—The 16 Marshall Plan countries voted unanimously today to include the three western occupation zones of Germany in the European Recovery Program.

It was the first big step in welding all western Europe into an economic block of nearly 300 million people.

Meanwhile, Britain and France were moving behind the scenes to include a majority of the Marshall Plan nations in a military defense pact.

It was hoped that within the next few months at least 10 of the 16 Marshall Plan countries would be bound together both economically and militarily in a double bulwark against Communist expansion.

Ready to Cooperate

Portuguese Foreign Minister Jose Caeiro da Mata proposed formally at today's plenary session the admission of Spain to the Marshall Plan "at the opportune moment." But Britain and France were expected to see to it that the proposal is quietly dropped.

The formal part of the conference of the 16 nations was ended. Only two days of plenary sessions showed a general agreement. They indicated that every one of the Marshall Plan participants was ready, with American aid, to cooperate to get western Europe back on its feet.

Delegations now will split into committees which will consider technical problems and organize a permanent Marshall Plan headquarters.

At today's session the conference approved an important report by Claude Bouchinet Serreulles, secretary general. It said:

Gold Reserves Exhausted

1. Progressive exhaustion of gold and foreign reserves has hampered imports and kept industrial production down but the Marshall Plan countries are determined to do all they can to help themselves.

2. Coal production has been increased enormously. The United States has helped by exporting coal. A present daily production of 300,000 tons a day in the German Ruhr permits export of 7,600,000 tons of coke a year.

3. In France 125,000 German prisoners of war have decided to remain as civilian workers.

Torrential rains followed the blow. Clyde Anderson, business man, estimated the total loss at $500,000.

Army to Basic (?) Size

Russia Demobilizes Again; Men Over 21-22 Go Home

Moscow, March 16 @.—The Soviet Union published today its sixth demobilization decree since the end of the war.

This step was taken a month before the Italian elections and at a time when the relations of Russia with the United States, Britain and some of the other western powers are at their lowest point.

The decree ordered the demobilization of all but the 21 and 22-year-old classes. All older classes will be sent home by the end of March.

The men being released by the end of March are seasoned veterans who have seen battle. They will now be a valuable addition to Russia's manpower in the drive to speed agricultural and industrial output.

The decree said the new mobilization would reduce the Soviet army to its basic size. There is no information on what this size is.

Army Rules It Cannot Call Up Veterans

Officials Say Congress Must First Enact New Draft Law

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Army ruled yesterday that the millions of discharged World War II veterans who were inducted under Selective Service are not reservists.

It said they could be called back into uniform only by passage of a new draft law by Congress.

This stand is taken despite a provision of the Selective Service law which specified that discharged "selectees" should go into a reserve status for 10 years, or until they are 45 years old. Some authorities had contended that the proviso gives the Army a string on the veterans, despite their discharge.

"It is the view of personnel and legal officials in the Army," said a memorandum to the press, "that new legislation would be required to recall to duty veterans of World War II who served under the Selective Service Act."

Would Exempt Veterans

Army officials have said that if any new draft proposal is proposed to Congress, they will ask that veterans be exempt. Only in a complete wartime mobilization would they propose calling back the former servicemen.

The Army statement revealed that its legal experts are studying the present status of presidential emergency powers to determine definitely what authority exists to call up the National Guard and Reserves. Officials stressed, however, that there is no present intention of calling the Guard or

Internal Revenue May Check 'Short' Liquor Bottles

Internal Revenue may investigate short measure bottles in local liquor stores, J. Thomas Kennedy, Superintendent of Weights, Measures and Markets, revealed last night.

Kennedy said Revenue Department men conferred with him yesterday, but did not indicate whether they will act.

"Short" bottles were found in 15 of 16 liquor stores checked yesterday, Kennedy said. Alcoholic Beverage Control Board inspectors, assigned to look for shortages, noted nine additional stores where "short" bottles were observed.

Dealers are being warned to get rid of short stocks, Kennedy said. Arrests will follow if rechecks indicate his orders haven't been followed, he declared.

Italy Recruits 30,000 Men to Block Revolt

Security Forces Augmented to Handle Election on April 18

Rome, March 16 (AP).—The government has added 30,000 men to its public security forces, and is strong enough to smash any revolutionary attempt by the extreme left, Vice Premier Randolfo Pacciardi said today.

Pacciardi, chief of the cabinet public order committee, disclosed in an interview that the security forces have been bulwarked by recruits from the army who are "moderrly armed, trained in street fighting and rationally disposed about the country with due regard to danger areas."

The critical period will follow the April 18 national elections, and Pacciardi predicted the government will be in an even better position then to meet any attempted revolt.

He is head of the small leftist Republican Party which, with the Labor Socialists, joined the government of Premier Alcide de Gasperi in December.

He predicted the Communist-led popular front will not get a majority in the coming elections and the present coalition will continue to lead the country.

"I think the extremists have realized that they cannot win with violence and will not try it," he added.

Pacciardi said he believes the United States State Department announcement that Italy will receive no Marshall Plan aid if she goes Communist will have little effect on the campaign.

[The United Press reported an estimated 25,000 workers in the state-operated chambers of commerce struck today, and leftist labor leaders threatened a nationwide walkout of all government employes because of "political intimidation."

[The unrest stems from an argument over creation of a Communist-dominated leftist political bloc among state employes for the April election, according to the United Press. The government has ordered workers who join the bloc to give their reasons. Leftists charged this violated their political liberties.]

Argentina Restricts Use of Foreign Ships

Buneos Aires, March 16 (AP).—The government decreed today that all its imports and exports be handled in Argentine ships when possible.

U. S. shipping companies were the hardest hit. Foreign shipping circles expressed concern because nearly every country which has ships will feel the effects. Various U. S. shipping companies charged the measure discriminates against free trade. The manager of a British line said he believed the U. S. and British embassies would be asked to intervene.

To Vote 11-Billion Military Budget Boost Air Forces, Martin Declares

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

Swift increases in American armed strength were pledged yesterday by Republican House leaders on the eve of President Truman's tensely awaited special message to both Houses of Congress today.

The President's message, to be delivered at 12:30, was expected to contain a sober review of the foreign situation, and to call for added military power to back up American diplomacy abroad.

Withput waiting for the message, Speaker Martin met with the Republican Steering Committee and announced informal agreement on a large-scale rearmament program.

To Vote Entire Budget

He said there had been a decision to vote the entire 11 billion dollar military budget already asked by the President, and also an increase in spending to build up the air forces to effective fighting strength.

"We agreed," said Martin, "that we want to give the armed services absolutely everything needed to put the country in a good defensive position."

The Speaker, the unchallenged leader of the House Republicans, also threw his weight yesterday behind a speed-up in the timetable of the European recovery legislation.

President Truman's address to Congress at 12:30 p. m. today will be carried on all radio network stations here and on WINX.

The result was an agreement by the Foreign Affairs Committee to bring out a combined foreign aid bill by Friday or Saturday; to start general debate in the House on Tuesday; to begin considering amendments under the five-minute rule on Easter Monday, March 29; and to have the bill out of conference and on President Truman's desk by April 5, if possible.

Voices Own Awareness

As if these evidences of Republican concern were not enough, Martin also issued a statement expressing his own awareness of present international dangers, especially the Italian election on April 18. His statement made a direct appeal to Americans of Italian descent to send air mail letters to their relatives in Italy, warning them of the dangers of voting Communist.

The President's message was preceded by a day of world-wide guessing about its contents, and by these other developments:

1. A meeting of congressional leaders at the White House this morning, for a preview of the speech, was called off at the request of Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Vandenberg, who said he had not been consulted about the President's message, said his committee would be holding an important meeting on foreign aid legislation at the same time. Those who were invited to the White House were Senators Vandenberg and Barkley, Speaker Martin and former Speaker Rayburn.

2. Henry A. Wallace wired congressional leaders that the President was creating a third "artificially created crisis to cover up the failures of his own policy," and begged them "to quell the war hysteria which is being fanned by the military and cartelist members of the Administration."

3. As another evidence of its concern over the Italian election, the Administration announced the immediate transfer of 14 former Italian merchant ships back to Italy, and of 15 Liberty ships intended to replace other Italian ships lost or worn out after wartime seizure.

President Truman announced the ship transfer in a statement ex-

3000 Staff Boost Projected In Budget of Agriculture Dept.

AGRICULTURE: Its annual budget as reported to the House yesterday would permit it to increase its 65,000-man staff by about 3000 employes.

Most of the expansion would be in the Soil Conservation Service, which was given an additional six million dollars to enable it to send technical experts to hundreds of new soil conservation districts.

Farmers Home was given one million dollars more for salaries than it has this year, but $1,000,000 under the President's estimate. It would be able to hire several hundred new employes. The House Appropriations Committee recommended a three-million-dollar increase for Research and Marketing.

Minor reductions would have to be made in these agencies: the Commodity Credit Corporation, which was cut $875,000; the Solicitor's Office, which was cut $100,000, and the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, which was slashed $88,500.

CEILING: The committee voted to crack the $10,000 Classification Act ceiling for any 10 Agriculture employes designated by the Secretary. It did not place a limit on these 10 salaries. The committee reported:

"It was impressed with the statement made by the Secretary concerning the losses of personnel in many of the higher grades where the duties of the position require abilities and experience of a very high order. The Secretary reported that he is constantly losing personnel in this category because the incumbents receive offers from private industry which are so greatly in excess of the salaries the department can pay under the limitations of the Classification Act that the employes to whom these offers come cannot, in justice to themselves and their families, decline."

The Secretary emphasized that he won't try to meet any offer; that most people would rather work in Government at a salary smaller than they can earn in industry.

BOOSTS: Along the same line, there are moves on which would increase the salaries of the heads

Students at St. John's College Favor Admission of Negroes

Annapolis, Md., March 16 (AP).—Students at St. John's College have gone on record overwhelmingly as favoring the admission of Negroes.

Robert Davis of Scottdale, Pa., moderator of the student government, said today undergraduates had voted 162 to 33 for this resolution:

"The student polity hereby resolves that it would welcome the admission of students of any race or color to St. John's College."

Davis, a senior, added:

"This resolution was not intended as a petition to or a demand on the administration or the board of visitors and governors. It was rather the result of student discussion and deliberation about whether an admissions policy which would enter Negro students into the college community would be acceptable to the student body."

John S. Kieffer, president of the college, said he had no comment now.

St. John's is the seat of the "great books" academic program. Undergraduates read classics of Western Civilization and coordinate these with laboratory work and a study of science in their four-year course.

There are no Negroes among the approximately 240 students enrolled.

Davis said an eight-member committee which sponsored the

Royal Rumor

Elizabeth Expecting Heir In October, London Hears

London, March 16 (U.P.).—Sources close to Buckingham Palace said today that Princess Elizabeth is expecting a baby, probably in October. The princess was married last November 20 to Prince Philip, Duke of Edinburgh.

There was no confirmation of the report. Buckingham Palace refused to comment. But a source close to the palace said the royal family was expecting the birth of a child to the princess some time in October.

If the report proves true, the first official intimation would come in formal announcement from the palace, probably in June.

As Elizabeth is heir presumptive to the throne of her father, King George VI, her first baby will become second heir. If a boy, he would become heir apparent when Elizabeth ascends the throne and will be made Prince of Wales. If a girl, she will be, like Princess Elizabeth, merely heir presumptive and would be superseded as heir by any boy born later.

The princess seems gradually withdrawing from public life and her West End social activities are diminishing. She and Prince Philip are not going to accompany the rest of the royal family to Australia and New Zealand early next year. The princess and Philip have canceled their privately planned, though never announced, plan to visit Canada and the United States this spring.

Martin Calls Turn Again in Party Race Against Truman's Special Message

House Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr., political strategist, yesterday paced his Republican Party to the forefront in a race against President Truman's special message to Congress today.

He publicly pledged his party to informal agreement to back up American diplomacy abroad with military might, a pretty sharp clew he believes the President will ask just that today. And a sharper clew that he believes the time is politically ripe for such a step.

Presidential heir, but not aspirant, he got that far by his ability to call the turns. Also for his willingness to give way, when necessary, when fighting would lose his party ground.

SPEAKER MARTIN
Goes into action

Martin showed his sharpness at an early age. Born November 3, 1884, he was one of seven children of a blacksmith. He became a newsboy at 5. And by the time he entered high school he was hiring his brothers to help him.

He turned down a scholarship to Dartmouth at the age of 18 to enter the other side of newspaper work, reporting. And within six years he became publisher of his own sheet, the North Attleboro (Mass.) Chronicle. Eventually he became its sole owner.

Joe (even his most formal friends hesitate to call him Joseph) entered politics in 1911 when he became a member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives. In 1914, he stepped up to the State Senate. In 1917, he quit politics for good, he said.

But by 1924, his party elected him to the United States Congress, with Calvin Coolidge the President.

In politics, Joe at one time or another succumbed to almost every inducement to get votes for his party save marriage. Which makes him, at 63 and first in line for the presidency should Truman die in office, one of the Nation's most eligible bachelors.

Small, wiry and energetic, he early showed a knack at handling recalcitrant party members, and wheedling over the discontended of the opposition in matters furthering the Republican causes. The Republicans made him their House Leader (then in the minity) in 1939.

He became Speaker of the House (majority party leader) when Congress convened in January, 1947.

Naturally, in 24 years of congressional maneuvers, he doesn't boast about today. Fo rone thing, he slanted to isolationism before World War II. He made up, later, by voting for the one-year draft after the fall of France, its extension in August, 1941, before Pearl Harbor.

But for many more times than the opposition care sto admit, Martin has managed to put his party a step out in front.

Maybe he did that yesterday.

Montgomery Suits Stay Ordinances

Enactment of ordinances in Montgomery County may be sidetracked temporarily until pending suits contesting the powers of the County Commissioners are settled.

Currently filed in County Circuit Court and awaiting hearing are two suits filed by James H. Pugh, former State's attorney, on behalf of persons fighting the recently enacted slaughterhouse and taxicab ordinances.

Pugh contends the commissioners' powers to enact ordinances under a "public health and safety" clause are "indefinite and discretionary." Delegation of such powers by the State Legislature is "an unlawful delegation of unrestricted legislative authority," Pugh charged.

During discussion of a proposed ordinance yesterday at a meeting of the commissioners in Rockville, Attorney Thomas C. Kelley, county board legal adviser, recommended that the commissioners enact no further ordinances pending settlement of the question before the Circuit Court.

"I suggest you hold all ordinances in abeyance until the Circuit Court gets through with us," Kelley said.

The commissioners took the Kelley proposal under advisement pending further legal study but President Brooke Johns, of the commission told reporters the board probably would follow Kelley's advice.

Public Utilities Agent Albert E. Conradis started to disclose names of hackers whose taxi driving permits he recommended denying, but the commissioners told him to discuss the matter in executive session.

A Silver Spring real estate man, Phil D. Poston, asked lowering of the county tax assessment on a 20,000-foot tract at Georgia ave. and the Blair Mill rd. He said the owners, L. P. and Guy Steuart, paid $35,000 for the property three years ago and the present assessment of $45,000 "is inequitable." The request was taken under advisement.

pressing "the feeling of friendship and admiration of the American people for the Italian people who, in these brief years since the war ended in Europe, have made such courageous strides forward in the democratic faith and have repeatedly shown the world that, supported with courage and wisdom, this faith cannot and will not falter or fail."

The ships are now tied up at Wilmington, N. C. Some Italian seamen, the advance guard of a total of 800, are already on their way to the United States to man them. Congress authorized the transfer last August.

4. The Department of Justice announced that Italians who turn Communist will forfeit any hope of emigrating to the United States.

5. Representative John D. Lodge (R., Conn.) made public a letter to President Truman urging new American steps to win Italian goodwill. Among them were the prompt issuance of a statement favoring Italian trusteeship for the former Italian colonies, a new attempt to get Italy admitted to the United Nations, and modification of the peace treaty so that Trieste could be handed back to Italy.

Puts Emphasis on Italy

Speaker Martin's statement but heavy emphasis on the Italian election, although it also dealth with the foreign situation generally. It said:

"The constant advance of the Iron Curtain across Europe has created a grave crisis in our international relations.

"There is no reason for the American people to be other than perfectly calm as we all strive for peace. However, we must do all we can, as individuals, to make American strong and secure in order that w emay more effectively promote peace.

"As to the details by which we will meet this situation, there may be room for some diversity of views and discussion. But on determination that we will meet it, and meet it promptly, America is united.

Must Build Up Defenses

"We must build up our military and naval establishments. We must build and maintain a mighty air defense. We must have the strongest navy on the seas. We must make outselves absolutely supreme in the air and under the seas.

"In this issue, where the fate of civilization is at stake, we must spare no effort to be sure of the outcome."

The Speaker went on to say that the results of the Italian election were "of great concern" to the American people.

"A Communist victory would mean communism would rule in the Mediterranean and unquestionably dominate all of Europe," he said. "Communism entrenched in Italy would prevent the rehabilitation of that country and destroy the freedom of the people."

Urges Letters to Relatives

He then appealed to people of Italian descent living in this country "to help save the land of their fathers, and prevent the catastrophe which would result from a Communist victory," by writing to their relatives in Italy.

"A 15-cent stamp might turn the tide for peace," he said.

His statements, and his comments after meeting with the Standing Committee, made no mention of universal military training or of the possible drafting of men to make up gaps in the armed forces. Both were expected to be mentioned in the President's message; Martin has opposed UMT, and the Rules Committee has prevented it from getting to the House floor.

Secretary Marshall will testify on UMT and the defense program generally at an open hearing of the Senate Armed Service Committee at 2:30 today, after the President has spoken. It will be his first public pronouncement on UMT since becoming Secretary of State.

Preesident Truman canceled a number of appointments yesterday to work on his message. Late in the afternoon he was closeted for three hours with Secretaries Marshall, Forrestal and Harriman and with Counselor Charles E. Bohlen of the State Department, working on the manuscript.

Truman to Expand Policy Talk Tonight

To Enlarge Upon Message to Congress At New York St. Patrick Celebration

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman will speak on foreeign policy twice today—first, at 12:30 p. m. before a joint session of Congress and then at 10:30 o'clock tonight before the Society of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick in New York.

The New York speech will be an extension and an amplification of Mr. Truman's remarks on Capitol Hill. It will be delivered in the Astor Hotel and will be broadcast by all four major radio networks. Station WINX also will carry the President's remarks.

Originally, the Chief Executive had planned only one St. Patrick's Day oration, that in New York.

Planned Informal Talk

He had intended to make a more or less informal talk in the spirit of the day. Somewhere along the line, following the Communist coup in Czechoslovakia, he changed his mind and decided to speak on foreign policy.

On mature deliberation, Mr. Truman decided that it would be better to make theinitial statement on foreign policy before Congress rather than before a dinner gathering, however important that gathering might be.

This decision was made Monday. There wasn't sufficient time to prepare a speech for delivery before Congress by yesterday, and so the time was set for 12:30 p.m. today.

All this has necessitated a revision of travel plans and also the preparation of two highly important speeches.

Plan to Go by Plane

Whereas the President and members of his party had planned to leave for New York on a Pennsylvania Railroad train at 8:45 o'clock this morning, they now plan to go by airplane—weather permitting.

Mr. Truman's speech before a joint session of Congress will take 15 or 20 minutes to deliver. Afterward he will start for the airport and probably will be on his way north by 1:30 p. m. or earlier. He hopes to review at least a part of the St. Patrick's Day parade down Fifth ave.

If the weather is bad, the Chief Executive will go to New York by train. He would miss the parade, but would be in plenty of time for the dinner at the Astor.

The First Lady and Miss Margaret Truman, together with Mr. and Mrs. Earl Stewart, will follow the original plan and start for New York by train this morning.

Others in His Party

Others in the presidential party will be Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy, Mr. Truman's Chief of Staff; Matthew J. Connelly and Charles G. Ross, White House secretaries; Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, Army aide; Capt. Robert L. Dennison, Navy aide; Col. Robert B. Landry, Air Force aide; Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Edward H. Foley, jr., Oscar Ewing, Federal Security Administrator; Eben Ayers, Assistant Press Secretary; Jack Romagna, assistant to Secretary Connelly; Dewey E. Long, White House transportation officer, and his assistant, Russell A. McMullin.

George Allen, former member of the Reconstruction Finance Corp. and a former confidante of the President, will make the return trip, which will start from the Pennsylvania Station tonight at 11:59 o'clock.

A party of 30 reporters and photographers will accompany Mr. Truman.

Housing Project Inspected by House Prober

George H. Perkins, investigator for the House Expenditures Committee, yesterday inspected the big Viers Mill Housing project in Montgomery County, Md.

The inspection was a preliminary to hearings on the project by an Expenditure subcommittee headed by Representative Melvin C. Snyder (R., W. Va.). Hearings may begin this week.

With Perkins were Dana B. Johannes and Loren L. Murray, Silver Spring architects, who have made a report on the project to the subcommittee.

Perkins said the inspection party found faulty cement in foundation work, and that chimney construction was weak.

Pair Rob Man After Waving His Auto to Stop

Robert G. Fitzgerald, 27-year-old insurance agent, 510 Maple rd. se., told police last night two men robbed him of about $90 on Indian Head rd., in Prince Georges County, Md.

Fitzgerald said he stopped his car when two men waved him down as they stood beside a parked auto. One of them pulled a revolver, he said, and demanded his money.

Police, with description of only one man, sent a lookout for a 1941 or 1942 Buick. The man, Fitzgerald said, was 20 to 23 years old, 5 feet 6 inches, medium build, wearing a brown striped sports jacket.

Russia Using Wheat Politically, Dodd Feels

Russia is using wheat for "political purposes" in Europe, Undersecretary of Agriculture Norris E. Dodd suggested to the House Agriculture Committee recently.

Dodd's testimony, released yesterday, said the move is "complicating the situation very much."

Besides a Russian deal to ship 700,000 tons of grain to England in exchange for heavy machinery, Dodd said:

"The Russians also offered to enter into negotiations with other western European countries for wheat in amounts larger than we have in sight at the present time."

Guild, New Owner Are Continuing PM Negotiations

New York, March 16 (NYHT).—PM's prospects, which had seemed unbelievably black, took on a favorable hue today as long-distance telephone negotiations continued into the evening between the New York Newspaper Guild and Clinton D. McKinnon, San Diego., Calif., publisher.

Meanwhile, it appeared virtually certain that the tabloid would end its stormy eight-year career on March 26 unless the union, which represents 162 editorial and business employes, and McKinnon can work out an agreement.

Conditional sale of the paper to McKinnon, founder of the San Diego Daily Journal, was disclosed Friday by its owner, Marshall Field 3d, who said it depended upon acceptance by the guild of new conditions of employment offered by McKinnon.

Veterans Can't Be Called As Reservists, Army Rules

Reserves or ordering any one to active duty without his consent.

The Army Judge Advocate General's Department was asked for the ruling, it was said, partially as the result of press inquiries and partly to be ready for whatever President Truman may propose in his message to Congress today.

Forrestal Reports Accord

Meanwhile, Secretary of Defense James Forrestal announced that his weekend conference with the Joint Chiefs of Staff at Key West, Fla., produced a "general accord, in "all of the areas" in which the armed services had been in dispute.

"A number of basic decisions affecting the assigned functions, duties and responsibilities of the three Services were reached during the meetings," he stated. "The substance of these decisions, which affect the long term development of procurement programs for the Army, Navy, and Air Force will be made public when they have been formalized and expressed in specific language and approved by the President."

It was learned that the conference also went into the current international situation and what additional defense measures may be required to meet it. What was decided may be put before Congress by the President today or by Forrestal tomorrow. The Defense Secretary is to testify before the Senate Armed Services Committee then on the Nation's military situation.

Army chiefs hope that the President will ask for a return of Selective Service and universal military training. They do not believe he will propose a Guard-Reserve call-up, but feel that if he asks for draft authority, he might also request clearcut authorization to mobilize the Guard and Reserves in case of a later emergency.

As Army Sees Situation

As to the present status of the law and the still effective war powers of the President, the Army said that these points are clear:

1. Only Congress can authorizes the recall of the millions of World War II veterans who did not enroll in the Reserves when their war service ended.

(2) The President could call the National Guard for service in this country in case of invasion or a dire emergency, without Congressional action. Congress, however, would have to specifically authorize the Fuard to be sent overseas.

(3) Power to call members of the officer and enlisted reserve corps to active duty against their will expired last year. One exception is that reserve officers can be called for two weeks active training duty without their consent—through this is neither being done now nor contemplated.

One point on which officials desire a legal ruling is whether or not a presidential procalamation of a national emergency—without congressional action—would empower the Reservisits to be mobilized. They don't llok for such a proclamation, but wait want to clear up the point.

The Navy Department yesterday declined to make any statement as to whether Naval and Marine Corps Reservists are subject to call with congressional action. An inquiry on this point was answered only by: "No comment at this time."

In other defense developments yesterday, the Navy announced that it had exceeded its recruiting quota for February and the Air Force said it is having no trouble getting all the men it needs. This is in contrast to the Army, which is 120,000 men under strength.

USAF chiefs said that they had reached the 312,000 enlisted strength ceiling set by the President's budget message and is accepting recruits only to make up for losses. The Navy accepted 11,540 recruits and 5058 reenlistments during February to exceed its quota of 15,000 men by 1598.

Beard Appointed To $7102 Post in D. C. Tax Offices

The Commissioners yesterday named Charles A. Beard, jr., 40, to a $7102-a-year post as administrator of the income, inheritance and estate division of the District tax office.

Beard, a District employe for 21 years, fills the vacancy left by the death Feb.uary 17 of John R. Merrick. He formerly was a $4776-a-year assistant to Merrick.

A native of Rockville, Md., Beard is a graduate of Columbus University Law School here and a member of the District bar.

He lives on Upton st. in Rockville with his wife, Eleanora, and their two children, Charles, 7, and Cecilia Anne, born last month.

France Backs Out Of Palestine Plan

Will Not Declare Situation Now a 'Threat to Peace'

Lake Success, March 16 (AP).—A tentative big power agreement on Palestine collapsed tonight when France withdrew approval of a resolution which declared there is now a threat to world peace in the Holy Land.

At a morning meeting the United States, Russia and France agreed in principle that a threat to peace existed through continued infiltration of hostile elements across Palestine borders.

China reserved her assent on the grounds that such a decision was premature and should not specifically blame the Arabs and exonerate the Jews. Britain has boycotted the big power parleys.

After another closed meeting tonight, a U. N. press officer told newsmen agreement was not now nearly so evident. He said one of the conferees, later identified from other sources as France, had expressed the new opinion that it would be better not to proceed now to call the situation a threat to international peace.

Russia's Andrei A. Gromyko did not attend the second meeting because of what the U. N. described as a "misunderstanding" over the time of the session.

The U. N. press officer said the big powers now might take a whole new approach to the threat-to-peace problem.

Another session to include Gromyko was set for tomorrow, following the Security Council meeting on the Czechoslovakian case.

Heavy Water Charge Jails 2 Germans

Munich, March 16 (AP).—Two Germans caught with eight gallons of heavy water—used in some atomic experiments—were convicted and jailed today by a U. S. Military Government court.

The prosecution displayed as evidence two aluminum flasks salvaged from Nazi Germany's unsuccessful attempts to make an atom bomb. U. S. counter intelligence agents kept a tight guard over the proceedings. The trial was the first of its kind in Europe.

Judge Benjamin Reich, of Cleveland, Ohio, sentenced Dorothea Bartels, 30, to a year in jail, and suspended three months of her sentence. Hanns Floerke was sentenced to nine months in jail, with six months suspended.

Three other defendants, two of them Yugoslavs, will be tried Friday. All five were charged with violating Allied Control Council regulations on war materials by transporting and storing heavy water.

Sources in the Atomic Energy Commission in Washington, who had expressed interest in this case, have explained that heavy water is not used in U. S. nuclear fission research, though it is in other countries. Heavy water is a commercial item in the United States, available in the open market.

German Red's Ouster Starts War of Words

Frankfurt, Germany, March 16 (AP).—German Communists opened a campaign of denunciation tonight as one of their leading legislators was suspended from western Germany's economic parliament.

Max Reimann, graying Communist veteran from the heavily populated Ruhr mining area, was voted out for two months from the British-American zones' German Economic Council for what was called an "unbearable insult."

He was alleged to have told a February 28 press conference that he considered as "traitors" all politicians who supported merger of the British-American zones.

Reimann left the assembly chamber with his fellow Communist legislators began to berate other German politicians.

One denounced the council's new chief executive, (Premier) Dr. Hermann Puender, as a friend of the Nazis and demanded a vote of no confidence. The 104-man council ignored the demand.

Dr. Theophil Kauffmann, deputy council leader of the conservative Christian Social Union, said "There's no doubt now that the Communists are out to wreck the council. They probably will increase their opposition and their denunciations of all politicians who are trying to put Germany back on its feet."

[Bizonia's food ration will be increased by about 30 per cent effective next month, the bizonal food administration announced today, according to the United Press. Germans in the combined British and American occupation zones will receive 1560 calories per day, the announcement said. Rations in some areas now are as low as 1050 calories daily.]

Tons of Beer Afloat

Dover, England, March 16 (U.P.)—Channel ships were told today to be on the lookout for floating barrels of beer. Seventy tons were lost yesterday in a collision between a cargo ship and a motor torpedo boat off the Isle of Wight.

Truman Policy Helpful to Soviet, Taft Charges

Portland, Me., March 16 (AP).—The Democratic Administration's foreign policy is pro-Communist, says Senator Robert A. Taft.

It has been, the Republican presidential candidate told 1800 Portlanders last night, since the days of Henry Wallace, the late Harry Hopkins and others who surrounded the late President Roosevelt.

By "its friendship for communism," the Ohioan added, the Administration, both under Roosevelt and President Truman, "strengthened Russia until today we find the Russians menacing the entire world."

Taft entrained for Washington after his speech.

resolution is discussing the possibility of carrying it further.

The vote was taken March 4, two days after an assembly of the student body, Davis disclosed. Before the meeting, a four-page statement probing effects of the resolution was circulated among undergraduates. Prepared by Gene Thornton of Greensboro, N. C., it said at one point:

"We assert the importance of St. John's on the grounds that it has framed an education in accordance with the true principle that being a free man demands serious intellectual responsibility . . .

"Therefore, St. John's, which claims that western civilization through its great books can educate for freedom, should be especially challenged by the common charge that Negroes are incapable of being free men."

Soviet General Assails West Before Hungarian Parliament

Budapest, Hungary, March 16 (U.P.).—Marshal of the Soviet Union Klementy E. Voroshilov told the Hungarian Parliament today that eastern Europe's "democratic nations" must cooperate against the reactionary powers who are preparing for a new war.

Voroshilov

Voroshilov, who is a member of the Communist Party's political bureau in the Soviet Union and former head of the Allied Control Commission here, spoke at a formal session of Parliament honoring the 1848 revolution.

"Reactionary elements are not sleeping, but are preparing an imperialist bloc and a new war," Voroshilov said. "That makes necessary the cooperation of all real democratic nations against imperialists and warmongers to secure peace and democracy."

Russian foreign policy, he said, is "based on friendly cooperation with other democratic nations, respecting each other's sovereignty and independence and not interfering in each other's internal affairs."

Budapest was decked in flags to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the Hungarian revolution. Thousands of workers, Boy Scouts and members of social organizations paraded through the streets all day.

Five Czech Leaders Face Treason Action

Prague, March 16 (AP).—The Czech Parliament was summoned tonight to convene tomorrow. One of its first acts will be to vote on the arrest and trial for treason of five of its members.

The decree calling on Parliament to open its spring session was issued in the name of President Eduard Benes.

Parliament's immunity committee demanded today that the legislators strip immunity from arrest from the five members, paving the way for their arrest and trial.

These deputies included Vladimir Krajina, former general secretary of the Czech National Socialist Party; Jan Ursiny, former deputy premier; Fedor Hodza, former secretary-general of the Slovak Democratic Party, and Alois Cizek, accused of being Krajina's aid in an alleged plot to spy on the security police.

The leftist newspaper Prace reported, however, that Krajina and Cizek already have fled the country following the recent government crisis which ended in a Communist victory. Prace said Jaroslav Drabek, a National Socialist, who once prosecuted Karl Frank, the Nazi 'protector" of Bohemia, also had fled.

Council to Start Czech Debate Today

Lake Success, March 16 (NYHT). The United Nations Security Council will start its debate on Czechoslovakia tomorrow, opening the way for a crucial test of U. N. effectiveness in the face of Soviet-American antagonism.

The case is based on a request by Chile for a council investigation of charges by Dr. Jan Papanek, ousted anti-Communist Czech U. N. representative, that Russia helped a Communist minority overthrow the legal Czech government in the coup of February 22.

The first phase of the debate tomorrow will be the procedural point as to whether the case should be handled at all. With 8 and perhaps 9 of the 11 council members favoring full discussion against definite opposition only from Russia and the Ukraine, there was little doubt tonight that it will be admitted to the agenda.

Chile moved to strengthen its case today by arranging for the circulation of Dr. Papnek's original charges as an official Security Council document.

Catholic Boy's Slayer Sent To Bellevue

schoolmates on a busy street yesterday, was ordered removed to Bellevue Hospital for psychiatric observation.

Yesterday afternoon Markovich walked into a group of boys outside an armory where they had been watching their school band practice for the St. Patrick's Day parade. After making sure they were Catholics, he pulled out two pistols and began shooting.

Police said Markovich stuck to a story of hating "Catholics, Italians and politicians" because they were "responsible" for the death of his 13-year-old son, in 1944. Records showed the boy died following a cerebral hemorrhage.

Guerillas Strike Near Salonika, Suffer Heavily

Athens, March 16 (U.P.).—An estimated 350 guerillas struck within 30 miles of Salonika today, invading the village of Axioupolos, press reports said. The reports said the guerillas were ambushed later and suffered heavy casualties.

A general staff communique said guerillas shelled Kastoria, 5 miles from the Albanian border, Saturday night without inflicting damage.

Finn Parties Seek to Limit Soviet Pact

Helsinki, March 16 (U.P.).—All Finnish parliamentary parties extreme leftist Popular Democrats have approved a counter-proposal designed to cut down Russia's request for a military aid pact, well-informed sources said tonight.

The foreign affairs committee of Parliament will meet tomorrow to hear the party reports and make a decision on the government plan.

It was understood the government counter-proposal was:

1. Any agreement signed with Russia for mutual military aid would be limited to 10 years instead of 20 years as in the pacts Russia has signed with Romania and Hungary.

2. Military aid clauses would be effective only in the event of war.

3. Finnish armed forces would be used within Finland's borders and in case of an attack on Russia through Finland.

4. Russia would not provide Finland with military aid unless Finland specifically requested it.

The government hopes this counter-proposal may satisfy Premier Stalin and leave Finland with its independence, informants said.

Seeker of Yemen Throne Reported Chained in Cell

Cairo, March 16 (U.P.).—Reports from Yemen said today that Sayed Abdullah el Wazir, who sought the throne once held by the Queen of Sheba, has been chained to a wall in a cell in ancient Radi prison.

Details of the siege of Sanaa, capital of the tiny kingdom where Wazir ruled for one month after the assassination of his aged father, Imam Yahya, have begun to trickle through to Egypt.

These reports said tribesmen rallied by Prince Seif el Islam Ahmed, eldest son of the late Imam, laid siege to Sanaa for eight days before capturing the city.

It is expected Wazir will be charged with plotting the murder of Yahya, who died under a rain of rifle bullets while riding through the countryside near Sanaa.

Investigators Ban Oak Ridge Strike

A board of inquiry reported to President Truman yesterday that continuous operation of the Oak Ridge, Tenn., atomic energy laboratory "is essential to the national safety."

For that reason, it said, the union of workers there cannot "use the strike in support of its bargaining position as it might in ordinary collective bargaining."

Mr. Truman appointed the board March 5 to look into the labor dispute at Oak Ridge. It had no authority to make recommendations, only to investigate what are the facts about the situation and report to him. John Lord O'Brian heads the board.

The report was made public by the White House.

"The Atomic Energy Commission asserts that grave danger to the national safety will result if the operations of this laboratory are interrupted, and the board of inquiry finds this to be the fact," the report said.

The dispute is between the Carbide and Carbon Chemicals Corp., and the Atomic Trades and Labor Council. Eight hundred employes are involved.

The report will be sent to the Federal Mediation Conciliation Service for further recommendation.

The Conciliation Service said last union and the company will be re- night that conferences with the sumed at 10 a. m today at the Labor Department Building .

Firestone Tire Union Set to Strike Sunday

Akron, Ohio, March 16 (AP).—The CIO United Rubber Workers will strike Sunday at six Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. plants unless the company agrees to uniform contract provisions for all six plants, L. S. Buckmaster, URW president, said today.

The six plants are at Pottstown, Pa., Los Angeles, Memphis, Des Moines, and Noblesville and Newcastle, Ind. The two Indiana plants make industrial products and the others are tire factories. The union said about 8000 to 10,000 employes are affected.

Strike Notice Filed Against Chrysler Corp.

Detroit, March 16 (AP).—The CIO United Auto Workers today filed a routine 60-day strike notice against Chrysler Corp.

The union explained that the step is routine under the Taft-Hartley law to insure a right to strike if negotiations are too prolonged. A spokesman said a similar notice will be filed soon against General Motors Corp.

Negotiations began February 27 on the UAW-CIO's demand for a 30 cent an hour wage increase from Chrysler. They have been adjourned to March 24. The union also is negotiating with General Motors on a 25 cent hourly demand, plus pensions.

Prince Georges Votes Park Land Bonds

Reversing an earlier disapproval, the Prince Georges County Commissioners yesterday voted to issue $150,000 in bonds for purchase of park lands along the Paint Branch and Northwest Branch Parkways.

The bonds also will provide funds for construction of a building to house administrative offices of the Prince Georges County section of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the county engineer's office, and the building inspector's office. The building will be in Hyattsville on Hamilton ave. near Magruder Park.

Irwin I. Main, chairman of the Park and Planning Commission, and J. Bond Smith, the commissioner's general counsel, urged the commissioners to reverse their February 24 action rejecting the issue.

The land to be purchased totals 202.7 acres, of which 52.7 acres is for the Paint Branch valley parks. The land will cost approximately $112,500.

The commissioners directed enforcement of a law requiring contractors to clean mud dropped from trucks after a complaint from the Coral Hills Citizens Association and told a delegation from District Heights it would have to obtain funds from the Maryland General Assembly if the District Heights School is to be enlarged.

A delegation representing civic and business groups urged a $77,000 budget for the Prince Georges County Memorial Library but the commissioners said they would not increase the present two-cent library tax.

The commissioners approved a $22,041 budget request for the county fire control center, an increase of $1041 over the present year's budget, and a $435,983 budget request for Prince Georges General Hospital, $30,000 of which would be paid by the county, the same amount as last year.

The Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission informed the board that it will require a 10-cent tax rate this year, 3 cents for storm and water drainage, 6 cents for maintenance of the sinking fund on bonds issued for water and sewer mains and one cent for planning future projects.

The commissioners approved creation of a special improvement district, to be known as District 35, for Eastpines, following a hearing.

the Taft-Hartley Act, either party to a welfare trust fund could petition the court to name a neutral umpire in the event of a deadlock. He indicated that he would move to have the court act, whether or not Lewis joined him in a petition to thie end.

The principal stumbling block to agreement, Van Horn said, was the question of who was eligible for a pension. He charged that Lewis wanted the pensions to apply to all members of the union, including some "thousands" working in "several" smaller mines whose owners were not signers of the national wage contract.

Further, the operator's trustee said, Lewis proposed that former miners, who had retired prior to the signing of the contract, be eligible for pensions.

In both cases, Van Horn said, such payments would violate the Taft-Hartley Act. It prescribes that benefits from a union welfare fund may go only to employes of contributing employers.

Lewis' proposal, Van Horn said, was for a $100 a month pension to all miners with 20 years or more service and 60 years or more of age. He claimed that studies by actuaries hired by the trustees, and by experts from the Social Security Board, showed that the cost would be beyond the capacity of the fund.

"The fund can provide a pension plan," Van Horn said, but not the one Lewis proposed.

He said the cost of Lewis' plan would be $33,600,000 for the first year. The fund, accumulating for about 8½ months, now amounts to somewhat more than 30 million dollars. But it is to provide death and disability benefits and other health, welfare and insurance payments besides pensions .

Last week Lewis said that Social Security Board estimates showed that the cost of the pensions in the first year would be between 10 million dollars and 15 million dollars. He pointed out that not all miners eligible would choose to retire and become pension beneficiaries.

In a letter to the signers of the contract, released by Van Horn yesterday, he declared:

"The real and fundamental reason why the welfare fund has not become activated is due to the fact that Mr. John L. Lewis . . . is insistent that I join with him in circumventing, evading and avoiding the provisions of the (Taft-Hartley Act), by joining with him in granting benefits to persons not entitled under law to receive benefits . . .

"If the benefits were to be granted only to those entitled thereto, being those employed by the signatories to the agreement, it would not be a difficult task to get the matter adjusted.

Truman Studying Situation

"The actuaries' study and report shows conclusively that the pension proposed by Mr. Lewis would bankrupt the fund and would not leave anything for the other welfare purposes set forth in the contract. In addition thereto, it would be in direct violation of the law."

At the White House, Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said the President was studying reports of the walkout but that "nothing concrete" was done. In other quarters it was intimated that Federal officials were waiting to see what Lewis' reaction to Van Horn's proposal would be.

District Coal Supplies In 'Fairly Good Shape'

District coal supplies yesterday were termed in "fairly good shape" by local officials.

Patrick A. Deck, chairman of the Merchants and Manufacturers Coal Division, pointed out household fuels—mostly anthracite—would not be affected by a coal stoppage, and that there were 10 days to 2 weeks' supply of bituminous fuels on hand for commercial use.

Alexander Eadie, superintendent of the Central Heating Plant, which hooks into 122 buildings used by Federal and District Government offices, said that his supplies also were in good shape.

Murray Hits Congress Praise For Taft-Hartley Labor Act

CIO President Phillip Murray yesterday sharply criticized a congressional report which praised the Taft-Hartley Labor Act.

A majority of a Senate-House committee reported Monday that the act is working well, preventing strikes and encouraging industrial production.

A minority report of four Democratic committee members claimed the findings of the majority, headed by Senator Ball (R., Minn.), were "political." The joint committee was named to keep tab on the act's operations.

Murray said in a statement that the majority report is "an unqualified indorsement of the Taft-Hartley Act and its operation." Murray said:

"The report, in seeking to claim for the Taft-Hartley Act credit for the elimination of strikes, ignores the fact that during the latter part of every year there is a decrease in the number of strikes and man-hours lost due to strikes, and that this has been true for the past 20 years. . . .

"Moreover, recent European history teaches us that the abolition of strikes is hardly a sign of free democratic labor relations.

Trade Board To Seek 2% D. C. Sales Tax

A 2 per cent sales tax on all goods sold in the District will be asked of Congress by the Washington Board of Trade.

Maj. Gen. David McCoach, chairman of the Municipal Finance Committee of the trade board, told a dinner meeting of the group at the Statler last night that his committee has concluded "that there is no reasonable manner for meeting local revenue requirements except through the enactment of a sales tax."

He figured the tax, to be asked during joint committee hearings which begin today, would yield from 12 to 15 million dollars annually.

General McCoach also told members of the Board of Trade that his committee thinks the Commissioners' budget for the next fiscal year is too high, and that his committee "will strongly urge Congress to eliminate some of the items included, particularly the 935 new positions which the Commissioners have requested."

"Increases Must Be Stopped"

Declaring that "increases in local government costs must be stopped," General McCoach said that the population within the District boundaries is not expected to increase substantially in the next decade.

"If we are not successful in arresting decentralization," he said, "theer may even be a population loss . . . We are concerned with the growing number of relatively high income people who are moving into nearby Maryland and Virginia, and the attendant loss of tax revenue to the Districtof Columbia."

General McCoach also put his committee on record as "vigorously opposed" to a further increase in the taxes on property, and as favoring repeal of the D. C. personal income tax "because of the inequitable provision imposed by the Congress which exempts Federal salaries."

McCoach, former D. C. Engineer Commissioner, told his listeners that it apeared clear that the majority of Board of Trade members favor the sales tax, and cited a recent poll in which he said more than 80 per cent of the members were in favor of a sales tax and repeal of the personal income tax.

Shamrocks Distributed

During the dinner fresh shamrocks, flown from Shannon, Ireland, were distributed to speakers, guests and trade board directors of Irish descent by President John McNeilly.

Beardsley Ruml, former chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, spoke at the session on Government onds, and Harvey Jones, chairman of the business unit in the local American Cancer Society fund campaign, asked support of the group for the campaign.

Announcement also was made of the fifty-second annual spring outing of the Board of Trade, to be held May 15 at Seaside Park, Chesapeake Beach.

Kamp Is Found Guilty by Jury In Contempt of Congress Case

Joseph P. Kamp, 46, chairman of the Constitutional Educational League of New York yesterday was found guilty in District Court of contempt of Congress. The jury deliberated only 25 minutes.

Charges against Kamp stemmed from his refusal to produce records subpoenaed by the House Political Expenditures Committee. The group had sought the names of all those who contributed more than $100.

This was the second trial of Kamp on the charges. The first trial in December, 1946, resulted in a hung jury. Visiting Federal Judge Ben Moore of West Virginia, delayed sentencing until completion of probation investigation.

Government charges, brought by Prosecutor William Hitz, were based on violation of the Federal Corrupt Practices Act.

Representative John S. Wood (D., Ga.), a former chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities is expected to resume his testimony today in the trial of Richard Morford, executive director of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship. Morford is charged with contempt of Congress in refusing to disclose records to the committee.

Woods said yesterday he recalled that Corliss Lamont, a member of the board of directors of the council, had submitted some information to the committee.

Associate Justice Edward M. Curran ruled out as evidence defense exhibits of the text of speeches made before the council by Henry Wallace, Oscar Lang, Ambassador of Poland; and messages sent by Philip Murray, head of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.)

Senate Kills Agency Shift To Labor Dept.

President Truman's Reorganization Plan No. 1 putting the United States Employment Service and unemployment compensation programs under the Labor Department yesterday was killed by the Senate.

By a 58-to- 25 roll-call vote the Senate adopted a House-approved resolution rejecting the plan.

The employment service is now temporarily under the Labor Department but would go back to the Federal Security agency six months after the official end of the war. Unemployment compensation is now under the Federal Security Administration.

Senator Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.), leading Senate opposition to the plan, argued still greater economy and efficiency would result if the units were consolidated in the FSA. He contended any bureau shifts should wait on the findings of the Hoover commission on organization of the executive branch.

Senate defeat of the plan upset a 9-to-4 Labor Committee vote in support of the plan. Speaking for the Labor committee majority, Senator Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.) argued that the Hoover commission's report won't be ready until 1949.

Ball sadi all concerned agree the unemployment compensation and employment service programs are closely related and should be brought under the jurisdiction of a single department "without further delay."

Tobacco Quota Same for 1948

By The Associated Press

Secretary of Agriculture Anderson announced yesterday that the 1948 flue-cured tobacco marketing quota will remain at 955 million pounds.

This decision came after a department review of the flue-cured situation upon request of some growers to increase the quota. Anderson said "a careful investigation" of the market outlook showed an increase was not warranted.

The 1947 crop was about 1,320,000,000 pounds. The large 1946 and 1947 crops have built up the supplies to high levels, the Secretary said, and the Government will hold a surplus of more than 200 million pounds from these two crops.

House Unit Favors Popular Vote Plan

Proposal for Presidential Elections Would Require Constitutional Change

By The Associated Press

A Southern Democrat's proposal to elect Presidents by popular vote got a powerful thrust forward yesterday when the House Judiciary Committee approved it.

It is a constitutional amendment. This requires a two thirds votein House and Senate, and ratification by 36 Legislatures. Its adoption before the 1948 eletcion is virtually impossible.

The author, Representative Gossett (D., Tex.) aims to whittle down influence of minorities in pivotal States.

Gossett pushed the measure amid Southern charges that President Truman had an eye on the Negro vote in several populous Northern States when he took his explosive civil rights stand.

Gossett's amendment would keep the eletcoral college, but each State's electoral vote for President and Vice President would be divided up in proportion to the popular vote in the State.

The way 't is now, all of a State's electoral votes go to the candidate receiving the most popular votes. It is possible for a President to get in without even a majority of the Nation-wide popular vote.

Meantime a Southern Democratic uprising against nomination of Mr. Truman failed to win over Chairman J. Lyter Donaldson of the Kentucky State executive committee.

Donaldson said he had an invitation from Chairman Herbert Holmes of the Mississippi State Democratic executive committee to join such a movement. Donaldson said the foreign situation requires a united front.

Georgia Democratic Leaders Ignore Call

Atlanta, March 16 (AP).—Georgia's Democratic party leaders looked the other way today when asked to join a call for a convention of Southerners sizzling over President Truman's civil rights program.

State Democratic Chairman James S. Peters said he had a bid from the Mississippi leaders to join in sponsoring a protest assembly, but he declined. He didn't even reply to the telegram.

Asked whether he or his associates, including Herman Talmadge, would attend the meeting if one is called, Peters said "no comment."

Gov. M. E. Thompson says the controversy over what to do about civil rights is for Peters to determine as chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee.

Peters said today, "Acting Governor Thompson started this fight. Let him finish it."

He referred to Thompson's participation in Southern Governors' Conferences. The governors voted Saturday in Washington to oppose President Truman or any candidate backing civil rights legislation.

Vermont Posse Fails to Find High School Girl, Abductor

Concord, Vt., March 16 (U.P.).—A posse searched the snow-covered hills along Moose River today for Kenneth A. Ingalls, 34, and Charlotte O'Brien, the 16-year-old high school girl with whom he fell in love while working last summer on her father's farm.

Charlotte O'Brien

Ingalls took the girl from her home Sunday night after threatening to kill her and her parents if she refused to go with him.

After 36 hours' search, the 150-man posse still did not know how the pair had escaped.

According to police, Ingalls was said to have been "very attentive" to Charlotte last summer when he worked as a hired hand at the farm where her parents took in summer boarders.

The mother, Mrs. Charles O'Brien, said Ingalls invaded their home with his rifle Sunday night. She said Ingalls said:

"Charlotte, either you're coming with me or I'll put a bullet through your mother's head and kill your father and you."

Mrs. O'Brien said Ingalls told them, "I just want Charlotte to come to St. Johnsbury with me while I get some papers signed."

He promised to return her Monday morning, Mrs. O'Brien said, but did not do so.

Gen. Meyers, No. 76716 in Jail, Facing Loss of Retirement Pay

Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers (ret.), now No. 76716 at District Jail, faces the possibility of being dropped from Army rolls altogether and losing his retirement pay of about $2500 a year.

Under the 118th Article of War, President Truman can strike Meyers' name from the Army rolls if Meyers serves as much as three months in jail on a sentence handed down by a court of competent jurisdiction.

Such action would deprive Meyers of the retirement pay which he is receiving. Already, without legal action, Meyers has been deprived of his medals, decorations and $550 a month physical disability pay.

The matter is one for study by the Judge Advocate General's Department. Officers on active duty have been dropped under this article of war, but so far no retired officers have faced such action.

Meyers' attorneys yesterday asked the United States Court of Appeals to let him out of jail on bond pending a review of the general's conviction on charges of inducing perjury before a Senate subcommittee.

He was sentenced to serve 20 months to 5 years by Justice Alexander Holtzoff Monday, and is under indictment on three other Federal charges.

The United States Court of Appeals gave the Government five days to file objections. Meyers will be held at District Jail until the Appeals Court acts.

The Government will oppose bond for the 52-year-old general.

Meyers' attorneys charged Justice Holtzoff with "bias and prejudice," said the subcommittee had been acting illegally, and declared the Government hadn't proved its case.

Carving of Girl Admitted by 'Blind Date'

Cincinnati, OHio, March 16 (U.P.). Maiming and morals charges were filed today against Harold Boehm, 32, accused of beating Barbara Sevedge and carving initials in her arm with a penknife.

Boehm, admitted beating the 22-year-old woman and carving his and her initials in her arm, but denied holding her prisoner.

Miss Sevedge, suffering from multiple wounds, said from her hospital bed: "I wish I would have died."

Asking about reports she had been held prisoner in Boehm's apartment for two weeks, the blonde housemaid replied: "I don't remmeber."

"I met him on a blind date about two weeks ago," she continued. "He sounded wonderful over the phone. But listen girls—don't ever go on a blind date."

And let me tell you, girls, that it was an hour and a half of disquiet and discomfort. I have never been so shocked or startled. Such questions!

The questions were the same ones he had asked 6500 women before me and the same ones he'll be asking thousands more.

Expects to Change Laws

Dr. Kinsey said he expects his study to change the existing laws and moral codes to fit human nature. And, more important, to help the 10 to 30 per cent sexually maladjusted females in the country.

"Before we start the questions I feel it only fair to warn you," Dr. Kinsey said, "that if you lie we'll trip you up on it."

I swallowed hard and nodded. Dr. Kinsey wore a poker face as he started questioning me on my behavior practically back to the time I was born.

He put down my age, religion, schooling and occupation in symbols, the key to which he and his associates have committed to memory. He did not take my name.

Uncomfortable Time

I became decidedly uncomfortable as the questioning progressed. We talked about my home life, schooling, moral ideas, the times I'd been in love and when I'd first learned about the birds, the bees and the flowers.

At one point the friendly scientist guffawed at an answer, much to my discomfort. Another time, when I pointed to the liberal outlook of the modern college girl (of which I am one), he said an uneducated 10-year-old was much more broadminded in practice.

He told me that his book on sexual behavior of females would be even more startling than his book on males.

The women, Dr. Kinsey said, have a much wider range of sexual experience than men, "even though they're more reticent to talk about it."

Train Kills Girl As Dad Seeks Food For Her, 2 Sisters

Charlotte, N. C., March 16 (U.P.). The three homeless children of Henry Duncan, 54, waited on a railroad track today while he went into a cafe to ask for food.

Duncan, a former railroad sandwich vender, had roamed North and South Carolina with the children for five days, looking for work.

Reaching Charlotte with no money, they spent the night in a railway underpass.

"We were cold and didn't sleep much," said Hazel, 17.

As they waited for their father, 9-year-old Lillian went to sleep with her head on a rail.

Hazel didn't see the switch engine until it was almost upon them. She screamed and scrambled off the track, grabbing 11-year-old Alvin.

Palace Guards Battle Cold for Their Majesties

London, March 16 (A.P.).—Battle-dressed Buckingham Palace guards were called in today to double for striking janitors who left the King and Queen without central heat or hot water from the tap for their baths.

The walkout spread to about 50 government buildings in its second day. Some 1600 Ministry of Works maintenance men were idle in a strike for higher pay unauthorized by their union.

The work stoppage was 100 per cent in both houses of Parliament. Members had to hoof it up and down as many as 90 steps as the elevator men refused to work.

The strikers asked a wage raise of $2.50 a week. They get $19.50 now.

Czech's Research No Reason For Concern, Dr. Condon Says

Dr. Edward U. Condon last night declared there was no reason for concern because the wife of a Czech Embassy official does research at the National Bureau of Standards.

Condon, who is director of the bureau and himself under fire for alleged Soviet associations, said the Czech researcher was only one of about 30 foreign "guest workers" and that none was given any access whatsoever to classified information.

He added that their names were "regularly reported" to the State, Army and Navy Departments.

The question of the "guest workers" arose when a report was published yesterday that Government security agents were investigating the presence at the bureau of Mme. Doubravka Hajsman. She is the wife of Maj. Jan Hajsman, assistant military and air attache of the Czechoslovakian Embassy.

Condon stated last night that it has been a long-standing policy of the Bureau of Standards to permit foreign research personnel, as well as American scientific and engineering investigators, to work there. The policy was dormant during the war, but has been revived.

None of the "guests," American or foreign, are paid by Government funds, Condon said, except about eight Latin Americans supported in part by "Good Neighbor Policy" money.

Of the foreigners, Condon declared, Mme. Hajsman and three or four other Czechs are the only ones from Russian-dominated areas.

Mme. Hajsman, Condon said, has done work on the electron microscope and mass spectrograph. She was employed by the Sperry Gyroscope Co. during the war and "fully cleared" to work on various projects there, including radar.

He said that all classified material is confined to small areas, under ground, and that access is strictly limited. Passes must be shown and only 300 or 400 of the bureau's total 2500 employes are eligible to see the material or enter the areas, Condon continued. None of those eligible is a guest worker.

He explained that all the classified work is undertaken in behalf of other agencies—Amy, Navy, or Atomic Energy Commission—and that they, not the bureau, prescribe the security rules for its handling. They keep in close touch with the bureau, he said, to supervise the security methods.

Condon said that as recently as a month ago, he sent a copy of the bureau annual report, containing the names of all foreign guest workers, to a member of the House Un-American Activities Committee. It was that group which charged Condon with "knowingly or unknowingly" associating with an alleged Russian spy.

The recipient of the report, Condon said, was Representative Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.). Condon sent it, he said, along with a letter congratulating Mundt on his "Voice of Freedom" bill. That legislation provides funds for, among other things, the support of foreign students and scientists at American institutions.

According to the report, published yesterday, Mme. Hajsman asked a local photographic studio to discredit some Library of Congress documents for shipment to Prague. The propiretor of the studio called the FBI, but Mme. Hajsman never returned to have the work done.

Mme. Hajsman, 34, was questioned on the story by The Washington Post yesterday.

She declared that a Czech university had asked her to obtain some material on fluorescent lighting, which was published in the American magazine, Illuminating Engineer. She was going to get the magazine from the Congressional Library and have the desired pages photostated, she said. But on writing the magazine for permission, she was sent instead a copy of the article she wanted. Therefore, she transmitted that to Prague and had no need for microfilming the library copy.

She said she had never sent any documents to Europe from the Bureau of Standards. Those acquired by Czech universities and scientific groups, she said, were sent under exchange arrangements by the bureau itself or were bought directly from the Government Printing Office without her acting as an intermediary.

All 18 Oleo Tax Relief Bills Blocked by GOP Leadership

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Republican leadership on the House Agriculture Committee yesterday smashed down all efforts to reduce or remove federal taxes on margarine.

A week of argument over the relative merits of butter and margarine was ended when the committee voted 16 to 10 not to consider any of the 18 bills to cut margarine levies this session.

One Democrat, Walter K. Granger (Utah) voted with the Republican majority; one Republican voted with the Democrats.

Removal of the taxing laws was urged by the administration. Treasury officials reported total income at seven million dollars a year.

Taxes on margarine, which supporters of repeal say account for more than half of its reall cost, are:

FEDERAL

All margarine, ½-cent a pound.

Colored margarine, 10 cents a pound.

Manufacturers: $600 a year.

Wholesalers of all margarine, $200 a year.

Wholesalers of colored margarine, $480 a year.

Retailers of colored margarine, $48 a year.

Retailers of all margarine, $6 a year.

In addition to the above taxes, nearly every State has additional license fees and taxes, as follows:

Colored margarine prohibited in 23 States.

States taxes of 10 cents a pound on colored margarine in four other States.

Uncolored margarine taxed in seven States, from 15 cents a pound in Washington and Wisconsin to five cents in Iowa, Idaho and Utah. North and South Dakota have a 10-cent tax.

Twelve States have additional taxes ranging from 10 cents to 12 cents a pound on margarine containing cocoanut or other foreign oils.

Nine States levy special license fees on margarine manufacturers, ranging from $1000 a year in Wisconsin to $1 in Minnesota.

Thirteen States require still other licenses from wholesales: Montana, $1000; Wisconsin, $500; Idaho, $200, etc.

State licenses for retailers range from $400 in Montana to $1 in Minnesota. California and Connecticut both require additional licenses from public eating places serving margarine.

In addition, the dairy lobby has secured laws:

1. Prohibiting the use of margarine in the armed services.

2. Giving jurisdiction over laws governing margarine taxes and licenses to the friendly Agriculture Committee instead of the House Ways and Means Committee which has authority over all other excise, or revenue laws.

"That kills the legislation for this session" Chairman Hope (R., Kans.) told reporters.

But Representative W. R. Poage (D., Texas), an opponent of the margarine tax, declared:

"The fight will go on. We are not licked yet."

He and nine other Democrats were lined up on the losing side.

Poage called the decision to pigeonhole the repeal bills "political cowardice," and said the next move is up to the Senate.

Senator J. William Fulbright (D., Ark.) has advocated tacking on margarine tax repeal to the income tax cut bill. He discussed strategy with several other Southern Senators yesterday.

Representative August H. Andresen (R., Minn.), who offered the motion to defer action, told a reporter the fight "has opened a rift in the solidarity of the Agriculture Committee." He said the resentment of those who voted with the dairy industry may be shown when special legislation affecting Southern crops such as cotton, peanuts and tobacco comes up.

Poage said there probably will be no drive at present to obtain the required 218 signatures for a discharge petition. If successful, this would bring the repeal bills to the House for a vote.

"We will wait to see what happens in the Senate," Poage said.

House Unit Backs Southern States' Regional College

A resolution giving congressional consent to a Southern regional education agreement yesterday cleared the House Judiciary Committee.

The resolution approves a compact between the States of Alabama, Florida, Arkansas, South Carolina, Georgi , Maryland, Mississippi, Tennessee and Texas whereby they may establish regional colleges.

If the resolution is adopted, its advocates have said, Meharry Medical College at Nashville, Tenn., will become an institution for the education o' Negroes in medicine, dentistry and nursing.

GOP Tax-Cut Plans Collide With Foreign Crisis Needs

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The GOP's tax reduction program ran into its first big question mark yesterday as Congress awaited the President's report on the foreign situation.

Ranking members of both parties conceded that what Congress finally does about taxes may hinge on what steps the President proposes to meet critical world conditions.

"We are going right ahead with our tax bill unless the President presents the clearest, most imperative reasons for not doing so," Senate Finance Chairman Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.) told reporters.

Senate Democrats caucused for 90 minutes on the 4.8-billion-dollar tax cut approved by the Senate Finance Committee, but withheld any action pending the President's address to a joint session of Congress today.

Barkley Sees "Futility"

Senate Democraitc Leader Alben W. Barkley (D., Ky.) said he had no advance notice of the contents of Mr. Truman's message, but the President "might present a situation that would make it utterly futile to try to reduce taxes at all."

Start of Senate debate on the tax cut had been scheduled for today, but consideration was put over until tomorrow after the joint session was summoned.

A conference of the full Senate Republican membership will precede tomorrow's opening debate.

Members speculated meanwhile that a presidential request for a big increase in Air Force and other defense appropriations might make it impossible for Republicans to command the two-thirds majority necessary in both Houses to override a tax-cut veto.

"Veto-proof Formula" Fades

Until yesterday Senate Republicans were sure they had a "veto-proof" formula, that would attract enough Democratic votes to clinch an overrider. Last night they wern't nearly so sure.

The Senate bill scales down the 6½-billion-dollar House-approved tax cut to about 4.8 billion by a new percentage reduction schedule, with cuts ranging from 12.6 per cent in the lowest income brackets to 5 per cent in the highest. Unchanged, however, are the House-approved $100 increase in individual exemptions and split income benefits for all husbands and wives.

In its formal report filed yesterday, the Republican-controlled Finance Committee said the bill will provide "a stimulus to labor, management and venture capital" and help low-bracket taxpayers meet high living costs.

Democrats tried and failed to substitute a four-billion-dollar bill in the committee. Until yesterday Barkley had been expected to push the Democratic substitute on the floor. He said that will depend on what the President has to say.

Montgomery Doesn't Bar Negro Police

Negro applicants for the Montgomery County police force have equal chance with white ones—if such appointment serves the "best interest" of the community to be served.

This was part of a reply issued yesterday by the County Commissioners to petitions submitted several weeks ago by county Negro leaders.

Besides appointment of members of their race to the police force, they asked for improved schools and roads, and water and sewage facilities for their communities. They also asked removal of "Jim Crow" signs in public restrooms.

The County Commissioners, in a letter to Sewell D. Horad, president of the Citizens Council for Mutual Improvement, said:

1. It is the "wish and intention" of the board to provide adequate school facilities for Negroes.

2. The board "has already shown its desire and intention" to improve roads in Negro communities. Three recently-completed road improvement cases were cited.

3. The board will continue to "properly designate" (Negro and White) restrooms in public buildings as "such segregation of the two races does not harm . . . either group."

4. Negroes in the suburban area should contact the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission for extension of water and sewer lines. Those in the upper county should contract with the commissioners on a front-foot assessment basis—"the prevailing practice."

5. Regulations do not bar Negroes from the police force. Should "equally qualified persons apply for police positions . . . appointments will be made in those communities where it is felt the best interest of all citizens will be served without regard to color."

Martinsburg Favors Daylight Saving Time

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 16 (AP).—President W. D. Poland of the Berkeley County junior board of trade said today a majority of about two-to-one voted in favor of daylight time in a postcard poll conducted by the agency.

The vote was three-to-one in the city, he said, on 2002 cards mailed out. Principal opposition in the city came from employes on night shifts, Poland said.

Stopgap Rent Control Plan To Be Considered for District

A 30-day stop-gap extension of District rent control is slated for action of the House District committee today in its first meeting of the year.

The stop-gap extension, from March 31 to April 30, is planned to prevent a lapse in District rent control and give time for Distrirt leaders to review the finas form of national rent rotrol extesion before passig a one-year extension of the loral act.

Similar Plan In Senate

A similar stop-gap plan will be discussed by the Senate District committee in an executive session tomorrow.

In addition, committee aides said, there will be discussion of the one-year District rent control extension bill prepared by a subcommittee headed by Senate District Chairman C. Douglas Buck (R., Del.)

It calls for continuing District rent controls generally to April 30, 1949, but taking controls off hotel transient rooms as of March 31, and taking controls off housing accommodations that come on the market after January 1, 1948 either by new construction or conversion of old buildings.

Other Action Planned

In today's executive meeting of the House District committee, action is also planned on local bills which would:

1. Set up a three-member board to control non-military uses of the District National Guard Armory.
2. Authorize building the proposed Arizona ave. freeway in Northwest Washington to run from Canal rd. to Wisconsin ave., near Tenley Circle.
3. Place members of the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board under the Federal Classification Act.

Other bills would let the District license out-of-town doctors here who have certificates from accepted national examining boards; clear the way for an expanded driver training program in the public schools, and let the District make an industrial training type of home out of the National Training School for Girls.

Pastor Accepts Call

Winchester, Va., March 16 (Spl.).—The Rev. Raymond L. Booze has tendered his resignation as pastor of the St. Paul and Trinity Lutheran Churches in Stephens City to accept a call to the Gladesboro Church near Hillsville, Va., effective April 15.

The joint council of the two churches will meet Thursday to act on the resignation. The Rev. Mr. Booze came to the local churches three years ago. He is a graduate of Southern Seminary.

Arlington Tax On Federal Land Proposed

Arlington County stands to gain an estimated $1,250,000 more in yearly revenue under a bill introduced Monday in Congress, County Commissioner of Revenue Harry K. Green said yesterday.

The measure, launched in the House by Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), would permit Arlington to tax most Federal land holdings in the county. A similar Senate measure died in committee last session.

Representative Smith's bill would exempt the Arlington Postoffice, Fort Myer, Arlington National Cemetery, and Washington National Airport from taxation.

Green yesterday set the total value of all Federal real estate in Arlington at an estimated $302,504,240. Land assessable under Smith's bill, taxed at 40 per cent of value, would produce the estimated $1,250,000 annual revenue to the county, Green said.

Slum Program Funds Facing Capitol Fight

A House-Senate contest over appropriating $50,000 for Washington slum clearance planning is expected in conferences on the independent offices appropriations bill, Capitol leaders said yesterday.

The House has refused to appropriate any money for the Washington slum clearance program. It rejected in full the budget requests for $61,500 planning money, and $3,400,000, mostly to buy land, in the slum clearance program.

The Senate wrote $50,000 back into the money bill to be used by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission to develop the master plans which are the first step in the clearance plan.

Representative Richard B. Wigglesworth (R., Mass.) leader of the House conference group, yesterday was cool about the project. He said: "I assume I will be representing the House position as a fonferee."

Senator Clyde M. Reed (R., Kan.) leader of the Senate conferees, had predicted his group would be "lucky" to persuade the House members to accept the proposal to grant the planning fund.

6 Paddy Wagons To go on Cruiser Duty on April 1

The police paddy wagon—ignominious transportation at its best—is going on a cruiser basis April 1.

Chief Robert J. Barrejt yesterday disclosed a plan to take 9 of the 15 Black Marias out of service, epuip the other six with two-way radio and turn them loose to prowl on a group-riding plan, if need be.

The move will make 25 additional men available for street patrol and enable the six operating paddy wagons to make more than one pickup on a run without returning to the station.

Tentative territories assigned: One wagon to the First and Second Precincts; the thirteenth and tenth, ninth and twelfth, fourth, fifth and eleventh, third and seventh and sixth and eighth.

Auto at Hagerstown May Hold Clue in Woman's Arm Mystery

York, Pa., March 16 (AP).—An abandoned automobile in Hagerstown, Md., gave Pennsylvania State police today a pollisble clew toward solving York's woman's arm mystery.

However, before going to Hagerstown to examine the car, Detective Carl Hartman decided to get a detailed description of a similar automobile and its occupants seen near Airville last week.

The woman's forearm and hand were found by a dog in a wooded section along the Susquehanna River Saturday. Search of the territory has faile dto uncover other portions of a woman's body.

Hartman said the automobile abandoned in Hagerstown "answers the general description of the car seen near the section where the woman's arm was found."

"We don't know what it means, but we're going to find out," he said.

Hartman started for Hagerstown to inspect the car. But then switche to inspect the car, but then switched plans and went again to the Airville territory. He said he wanted to question witnesses who reported havir seen a green sedan with New Jersey license plates there Wednesday. A man, woman and child were reported in it.

At Hagerstown, Deputy Sheriff L. R. Isanogle said a green sedan bearing New Jersey plates was left at a garage by two young men who "seemed in a big hurry."

Isanogle said a search of the car turned up a pair of baby shoes and a party filled bottle of milk. He added the rear seat was "all in an uproar," as though there had been some commotion.

Ex-Greenbelt Policeman Gets Assault Warrant for Mayor

An assault warrant has been issued against Greenbelt Mayor Thomas J. Canning as an outgrowth of his admonishing a spectator at a meeting of the Greenbelt Town Council Monday night.

Justice of the Peace George Phillips, of Berwyn, Md., said yesterday he had issued the warrant at the request of former Town Policeman Robert Dodge, who became a target of the mayor's ire for interrupting discussions at the council session hearing a report on investigation of the town's administration.

Mayor Canning, at the meeting, strode from the council table to Dodge's chair, shook his finger in the ex-policeman's face and told him: "If you get out of order one more time, I'll have you thrown out of the meeting."

In swearing out the warrant, Dodge told Phillips the mayor "raised his hand" in threatening manner, the justice of the peace said. The warrant charged the mayor with "assault with intent to do bodily harm." The mayor said last night the warrant had not been served, but that he had heard about it.

"WHAT THIS COUNTRY AMOUNTS TO DEPENDS ON WHAT HAPPENS TO ITS HOMES."... That's why the life insurance companies and their agents are bringing you this series of messages to help you plan for greater family happiness.

"I pray the Lord my soul to keep"
Whatever our creed or language, we have all felt the impulse to pray. We may worship in various forms . . . we may call our God by various names . . . but, somehow, most of us express our faith in a Higher Power. When our loved ones are spared, we give thanks. At times of confusion or danger we call for guidance. When confronted by a mighty mountain, or the perfection of a tiny snowflake, we are awed by the wonder of life. We teach our children our faith, so that they will not be alone as they face the world.

FAITH is a family affair!
Faith is not just for holy days. Faith is for every day . . . at work, at play, in the quiet times the family has together.
We need faith—and never so desperately as today. The world is filled with voices of confusion. It is easy to feel helpless and alone. But faith in a Power outside ourselves can be a bedrock of family unity, a shield for family happiness.
A return to faith can give men and women a broader view of life—a sense of perspective. Then they are better prepared for the give-and-take of family living. Small disputes have less chance of growing into serious quarrels which may tear marriage apart. The family united in faith has a strong and lasting bond.
Children naturally turn to faith when it is a daily part of the family life. And when they know the real meaning of faith, they will be tolerant of those who express their faith in other ways.
The home atmosphere is far different when a family stops trying to walk alone, when it sees its place in the bigger scheme of things. It works together for the things it can control—and trusts its God for guidance in problems beyond its control. Such a family can't help feeling closer together, more sure of itself, happier!
To keep alive the family's faith calls for a positive plan—just as you plan for your family's material welfare. How your family expresses its faith is a matter of choice. What is important to you is that you do express it!

Wallace Asks Congress to Stop 'Hysteria'

New York, March 16 (U.P.)—Henry A. Wallace said tonight that President Truman and members of his Cabinet were acting as though "a war crisis were imminent" and called upon Congress to quell the "hysteria."

Wallace, an independent candidate for President, sent telegrams to members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the House Foreign Affairs Committee and other members of Congress.

"Your responsibility and that of the other members of Congress to quell the war hysteria which is being fanned by the military and cartelist members of the Administration is brought into sharp focus by the President's convening of another emergency joint session," he said.

"There is no evidence that any nation has threatened acts of aggression against us or threatens our national security. Yet the President and members of his Cabinet act as though a war crisis were imminent. The people look to the Congress for calmness and sanity."

State Dept. Refutes Wallace's Czech Story

Henry A. Wallace's attempt to blame the Comunist coup in Czechoslovakia on the United States Ambassador to Prague was rejected yesterday by the State Department.

At a press conference in New York Monday Wallace had accused the ambassador, Laurence A. Steinhardt, of supporting plans for a "Rightist coup" in Czechoslovakia.

He charged that Steinhardt made a statement, a day or two before the coup, calculated to produce a crisis. Asked for more information, Wallace said he had to catch a train and departed.

Yesterday the State Department denied the whole thing, indicating that one fallacy in Wallace's statement was that Steinhardt wasn't in Prague when the Communist coup was in the making.

The ambassador was in the United States during December, January and part of February and did not return to Prague until 5 p.m. on February 19, the night before the former Czech cabinet resigned. The State Department knew of no statement he made.

"From then on," Michael J. McDermott, State Department spokesman, commented, "you know who was running things in Czechoslovakia."

Agriculture Dept. Funds Cut $26,911,027 by House Unit

The House Appropriations Committee yesterday voted a mild $26,911,027 cut in the operating funds for the Department of Agriculture for 1949.

In doing so, the committee called for important changes in next year's program (beginning July 1) for the department. Among other things, the committee voted:

1. To start a $2,325,400 five-year plan for the National Arboretum at 28th and M sts. ne.

"When fully developed it is contemplated the arboretum will represent an institution comparable in character with the Kew Gardens of England," the committee report states.

The committee voted $327,000 for the preparation of plans and specifications "and the development of physical facilities" at the arboretum, and also $350,000 for more land "to round out the national boundaries of the arboretum."

2. It jumped the Rural Electrification Authority's program one-third by voting authority for REA to make loans up to 400 million dollars. The budget estimate had asked for 300 million. REA was limited to 175 million dollars for loans this year.

School Lunch Program

3. It transferred 65 million dollars from so-called "Section 32" funds—or customs duties set aside to promote agriculture—to the National School Lunch program. The budget had proposed a direct appropriation of this amount.

4. The committee, strangely, penalized Oris V. Wells, chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, for efficiency. Last year Congress trimmed the appropriation for "economic investigations" by BAE 20 per cent below the previous year, or $493,000. This year the committee authorized an additional cut of $88,500, with this explanation:

"The present chief of this bureau (appointed in May 1946) has made an excellent record during his incumbency, and, under reduced appropriations, has reorganized his staff in such manner as to give the department generally very adequate service in the field of agricultural economy. The committee has confidence in his ability to absorb this small additional reduction without impairment to the service."

Foot and Mouth Disease

5. The committee's report revealed that the United States expended $61,447,346 on the futile attempt to eradicate the dreaded foot and mouth disease from Mexican cattle. During the same time the Mexican government expended $4,215,987, and "provided military forces for maintenance of quarantine lines around the infected area and for other protective measures, the cost of which is not known."

6. The committee also took a very significant action in hiking the appropriation for agricultural research in Alaska above the budget askings.

"The committee believed that the Territory of Alaska has become, and would for a very long time remain an important link in the chain of our national security," its report stated.

HA Gets Biggest Cut

The committee thereupon increased the appropriation $41,000 to $185,940 for the agricultural research program, and also provided $300,000 additional, not listed in President Truman's budget, for buildings, etc.

In all the committee voted the Department $543,421,453. The biggest slash was a 16-million dollar cut in funds for the Farmers Home Administration.

The Marketing and Research program was cut seven million dollars and flood control funds reduced from 12 to nine million.

The committee increased the funds for the Soil Conservation Service six million dollars, from 38 to 44 million.

Winship Named To Holcomb Post

President Truman yesterday accepted the resignation of Gen. Thomas Holcomb as Minister to the Union of South Africa.

Mr. Truman nominated North Winship of Georgia, a Foreign Service officer, to succeed Holcomb.

The effective date of Holcomb's resignation "will be established after your arrival in the United States," the President told Holcomb in a letter.

Mr. Truman said he is accepting the resignation with deep regret.

Holcomb plans to return to private life.

People's President

Hats off to the House Judiciary Committee which has just reported out the Gossett resolution to amend the Constitution so as to give the people a direct vote for President and Vice President! This resolution would, for the first time, guarantee to the rank and file the predominant voice in choosing their Chief Executive. Today they customarily exercise that right, but it may readily be snatched from them by State Legislatures, as the revolt in the South against President Truman's candidacy has clearly indicated.

The Gossett resolution would not change the present apportionment of electoral votes among the States. Each State would still be entitled to electoral votes equal to the number of its Senators and Representatives. But instead of choosing electors to cast these votes, each State would be required under the Gossett resolution to hold an election to determine the apportionment of its votes among the presidential and vice presidential candidates. The electoral votes of each State would then be divided among the candidates in the same proportion in which the popular vote was divided. In addition to eliminating hazardous uncertainties from our electoral system, this arrangement would extend presidential election contests to the entire country as distinguished from the present practice of concentrating major energies in a few pivotal States. Prompt approval of the resolution by two thirds of the House would be a heartening step toward making secure the right of the people to control the Presidency.

Oil Policy

One reason given by some Administration officials for not "aggravating" the Arabs over the Palestine issue is the contention that this might upset American access to Middle East oil. If, in fact, the United States is relying on oil from the Middle East to supplement its own dwindling reserves in the event of war, then there is urgent cause to reexamine what passes for a national oil policy. For, apart from the question of whether the Arabs themselves could afford to cut off oil exports to this country, there is real danger in relying on such remote and indefensible sources in time of emergency. As Dr. Bernard Brodie points out in the March 1 issue of Foreign Policy Reports, the fact is that "for the United States the Middle East is one of the most insecure areas of the globe."

In a discussion of "American Security and Foreign Oil," Dr. Brodie attempts to cut through the welter of conflicting interpretations to evolve a coherent idea of the American position with respect to future oil supplies. If Dr. Brodie is not altogether decisive, a fault for which he may be pardoned under the circumstances, he at least smashes some perilous illusions and advances some constructive suggestions for assuring American access to this indispensable fuel.

He discounts, for example, the seriousness of the alarmist contention that on the basis of proved reserves the United States has only a 14-year supply of oil at current rates of consumption. At the same time he recognizes that new discoveries are diminishing, and that in the future extraction of domestic oil is likely to become a more expensive procedure. Oil reserves elsewhere in the Western Hemisphere have not been fully charted, but here too extraction expense is likely to rise. On the other hand, the United States has within its own boundaries oil shale and coal deposits sufficient to provide synthetic fuels for a great many years—in the case of coal an estimated 2000-year supply using 50 per cent of the available mineral. Again there are greatly increased costs to consider.

The dilemma Dr. Brodie poses is whether the United States can afford to rely on less costly oil imports that might militate against domestic exploration. He concludes that while the free competition of imports with domestic production is of advantage to the consumer, in the interest of security there ought to be some inducement, possibly through subsidies, to guarantee further domestic exploration as well as to promote the rudiments of a synthetic oil industry. These are, to be sure, somewhat vague postulates, but their vagueness is in itself a product of the loose way in which we as a Nation approach the problem of our future oil supply. For this is certain: in war and in peace oil will continue to be a major source of power for the foreseeable future; and without a broad policy that includes all aspects of future supply, we can scarcely act intelligently or economically. As Dr. Brodie puts it significantly, "strategic policy concerning Middle East oil is meaningless except in terms of the comprehensive domestic oil policy which is designed to supplement it."

Talk Of A Showdown

It is contended that the Soviet by its actions in Czechoslovakia and Finland has gone from a cold to a hot war. We cannot agree. What has happened in the last few weeks is merely in line with what has gone before. There is no change, except perhaps an increase in the tempo of the Soviet's cold war. In Prague and in Helsinki the Russians were afraid that the elections would go against communism. They could not afford to take the risk; they cannot afford the luxury of a tug-of-war back of the iron curtain in the present struggle for the West. The matter, in our opinion, is as simple as that. Why should the Soviet change the rules—from cold to hot war—when it is at such an advantage and is winning? The blunt fact is that, being a military as well as a police state, the Soviet Union is always on a war footing but knows that its best chance of success lies in pursuit of the cold-war technique.

The other day a correspondent in the adjacent column rebuked us for encouraging complacency by venturing to say that the Soviet would stick to cold war to the limit of the American patience. Nothing that we have said suggests complacency. At this crucial stage of Soviet success, cold war requires as much power and alertness as we can muster. It calls for the same preparedness as a shooting war, plus political statesmanship. But, if attention to realities is the beginning of wisdom, the need is to know one's adversary as well as to combat him. And that demands not only knowledge of Russia and the Russians but also common sense and an understanding of the elements of modern strategy.

In this connection Prof. Gilbert Murray, the British philosopher, the other day wrote of a report he saw in the Italian War Office in the early thirties which laid down "two absolutely true principles." First was that under modern conditions "it is madness for any nation to attack an antagonist of approximately equal strength" and the other was that the proper method of safe attack is to stir up party strife in the victim country till it reaches the dimensions of civil war, and then to intervene. Your victim is divided against itself, and all the devastation would take place outside your territory. The Russians would be fools as well as monomaniacs if at this stage of the game they abandoned their pattern of cold conquest.

Their technique is now in full display in Italy. Here, then, is the theater of the immediate showdown. It is satisfactory to know that the warning is to be conveyed to the Italian people that a vote for communism would be a vote against Marshall Plan benefits for Italy. Italy can be saved by bold electioneering by the United States, coupled with prompt passage of ERP and military unity with the western world. If, however, Italy goes Communist on April 18, Italy's election day, then it will be time enough to talk about an ultimatum to Moscow. Certainly we cannot afford to allow the Soviet to score any more success in the cold war.

Lucas Resolution

As our series of editorials under the caption, "Turning On The Light," was nearing conclusion, we were interested to note the introduction in the Senate of a concurrent resolution covering many of the reforms we had suggested. The author is Senator Scott W. Lucas. "It is precisely because I am convinced of the indispensable function of the congressional investigating committee in exposing corruption wherever it may be be found," the Senator said in submitting his resolution, "that I feel the time is ripe for the reform of committee procedure." Only Congress itself, he agrees, can bring about the necessary changes. Consequently, he has called upon the Senate and House to incorporate within their rules a code of fair procedure for all future congressional inquiries.

The Lucas resolution would give the witness summoned before a congressional committee the right to have his counsel present and to obtain a stenographic transcript of the testimony at cost. Reports of committees could be released only after discussion at a meeting called upon proper notice and approval by a majority of the committee members present. Both the committee and its employes would be forbidden to issue any report or statement alleging misconduct by any person, or including derogatory comments, unless the person in question had been previously advised of the criticism and given a reasonable opportunity to present a sworn statement to the committee. These are elementary precautions to protect the rights of individuals which no committee desiring to be fair can dispense with.

Senator Lucas adds a constructive rule that was not included on our list. He would forbid members and employes of investigating committees to write or lecture about the committee and its work for compensation. Whatever information the committee has should obviously be given to the public on an impartial basis. And all tendencies to exploit an inquiry for personal profit should be discouraged.

One portion of the resolution designed to protect citizens from defamation by congressional committees seems to us to go too far. Any person believing his reputation to be adversely affected by testimony in a congressional inquiry would have the right not only to testify in his own behalf but also to have the committee summon up to four witnesses to testify for him, and to cross-examine witnesses who might have reflected upon his reputation for not longer than one hour per witness. Obviously these provisions could be abused to clutter up the record with unwarranted personal publicity and to obstruct the orderly progress of the inquiry. We think that the rights of citizens to rebut criticism before congressional committees can be assured without risking obstruction to this extent. Nevertheless, the resolution as a whole affords a constructive approach to this difficult and important problem, and we hope that the Committee on Rules and Administration will give it sympathetic attention.

Unions And Elections

If Section 304 of the Taft-Hartley Act means what Judge Ben Moore of the Federal District Court has interpreted it to mean, we have no doubt that his finding that it is unconstitutional will stand. The judge concluded that Congress has "prohibited absolutely all activities of any person or group at elections." Of course, he was referring to unions and their officials, but even so his language was very sweeping. The chief question which the Supreme Court will have to decide, on appeal, is whether Judge Ben Moore has accurately interpreted the statute.

What Congress did was to make it unlawful for corporations and labor unions "to make a contribution or expenditure" in connection with any national election. Since labor unions are "composite entities," Judge Moore concluded, they can make no move which does not involve some expenditure. Consequently, they would be forbidden to do any act in connection with an election, and this he views as "an unconstitutional abridgment of freedom of speech, freedom of the press and freedom of assembly."

This view is sharply at variance, however, with the meaning given to Section 304 by Senator Taft, coauthor of the bill which became the Taft-Hartley law. Instead of forbidding all union activity in connection with an election, Mr. Taft said the measure would leave unions free to publish political newspapers if they were financed by subscriptions or contributions for that purpose and not by union dues. In other words, he thought the provision left the unions freedom of speech, freedom of the press and of assembly, except that they could not spend for electioneering dues collected for collective bargaining purposes. That view of the provision is further buttressed by the strong presumption that Congress had no intention of encroaching upon the Bill of Rights.

Apparently the Department of Justice was responsible in considerable measure for the view Judge Moore took of the law. According to the judge's opinion, the Government attorneys conceded that Congress had attempted to abridge the freedoms guaranteed by the First Amendment and then tried to justify that encroachment as a legitimate exercise of Congress' power to control the manner of holding elections. To us this seems to argue against the constitutionality of Section 304 rather than for it. We can scarcely conceive of the Department of Justice telling the court that an act of Congress curtails freedoms guaranteed by the Bill of Rights and then asking the court in all sincerity to uphold such an invasion.

Now that the case is going to the Supreme Court it is especially important that the crux of the issue be more cogently presented. For if it is unconstitutional to restrict the expenditure of corporate and union funds for political activity, a few strategically located corporation and union officials will exercise a powerful influence upon our choice of public officials.

Flight Training

While it is perfectly proper to protest specific abuses of veterans' training under the GI Bill of Rights, it is futile at this juncture to debate the purpose of the GI Bill itself. Whatever Congress originally intended, the fact is that a tremendous training operation has grown up. Although some of this training is not strictly related to vocational pursuits, much of it is serious and worth while despite the existence of so-called "frill studies."

A considerable cry has been raised against flight training. We were inclined ourselves to agree with the protest. However, on second examination, we believe that the fact that 118,000 veterans are enrolled in such courses is not so alarming as it at first seems. Obviously, only a small proportion of these men intend to become professional pilots. But, as the American Veterans of World War II pointed out before a House subcommittee the other day, such training does contribute to the national security by providing a reservoir of men "possessed of a broader and richer understanding of aviation and its problems." Certainly it adds to the understanding of the necessary scope of air defense and promotes the interest which aviation must have if it is to expand. Moreover, the training program is the nucleus of several thousand small airports, and as a practical political matter it would be extremely difficult to lop these off.

SONG OF THE GREEK SHEPHERDS

44 B. C.

We are the shepherds of Helicon,
We are the men who sleep
On a mountain-slope of shadows,
Watched by our quiet sheep.

The nights are cold on Helicon—
But a lamb in the crook of my arm
Its soft wool pressed against my breast
Has served to keep me warm.

The air is sweet with mountain herbs
Where rue and thyme are blent,
The small black hoofs of the bundling sheep
Click on the steep descent.

The sun sets bright on Helicon
Gilding the lambs' white fleece,
The flock has sought the sheep-fold—
And over all is peace.

Currency Recall

I do not question the good intentions of Representative Sundstrom in proposing his bill to call in the 28 billion dollars in currency presently outstanding and issue a new series in its stead. What I question, however, is his realization that his proposal is one additional attack on individualism and human liberty. Moreover, the bill is absurd because it will not even accomplish its purpose; it will only impoverish some people for the benefit of blackmarketeers and special dealers.

From the reports in the newspapers I understand that the main reason for the bill is to make it possible for foreign governments to coerce their citizens to surrender their old dollars to their governments in exchange for local currencies. I am afraid that Representative Sundstrom has not yet understood that, barring exceptional cases, exchange control is the diabolic instrument of totalitarian or stupid governments, or of politicians playing the game of politics. Our currency and banking systems are based on confidence and the sanctity of contract.

In point of fact, the effect of this proposal, plus the requisitioning by the French government of the 5000-franc notes, has brought a great run on gold in France, and pushed its price upward. It even had its effect in London, where people have begun to hoard the silver currency which is still in circulation. If governments continue to use coercion and undermine confidence, we are going to witness, and in not too long a time, the triumph of gold.

Will Representative Sundstrom explain why he wants to coerce the European citizens to surrender dollar notes, and not surrender gold in any shape or form, or diamonds, or platinum, or for that matter, valuable paintings? All these things are convertible into dollars, and can purchase American goods. I suspect that the reason why this didn't occur to him is because, like many other individuals, he doesn't understand what money is.

Let's not be million-wise and billion-foolish. Let the reputation of our country never be blotted with forsaking moral principles and in helping anyone destroy the right to private property, which is the condition of individual liberty.

Bulgarian Envoys

With reference to the dispatch published in the American press recently, regarding the dismissal of the former Bulgarian Ministers at Brussels and London, Vassil Youroukov and Prof. Nikolas Dolaptchiev, respectively, the Bulgarian Legation wishes to make the following statement:

1. The two Ministers in question had been requested to report to the government regarding the steps to be taken to improve relations between Bulgaria and the countries to which they were accredited. They refused to comply with this request.

2. In their capacity of Ministers Plenipotentiary they had failed to make any effort to improve relations between the respective countries and Bulgaria.

3. Prior to their departure for their diplomatic posts, both had expressed complete agreement with the domestic and foreign policy of the government and promised to support this policy.

Both persons were dismissed from their posts for failure to carry out their duties and for having undertaken their assignments in bad faith. Their subsequent statements to the press reveal their duplicity and treasonable intent. The central committee of the Zveno Republican Party has unanimously dismissed the two former Ministers from membership for life.

Thomas Committee

I do not see how any intelligent citizen can do other than feel indignant, sorry and ashamed that the House of Representatives has voted the Un-American Activities Committee $200,000 of the public money for the coming year. In view of the committee's record in the matter of wisely spending the people's money, and especially in view of its adolescent, pettish, snarling and vindictive persecution of Dr. Condon, the great majority (more than 300 votes) which the appropriation commanded must be taken as a significant indication of the level of ethical conduct and intelligence of the House of Representatives.

One does not have to be a Republican of the stamp of Mr. Thomas in order to recognize the necessity of vigilance on the Government's part against espionage and infiltration. But neither does one have to be a Wallace in order to see proved again and again that the Un-American Activities Committee, which wields the power to destroy reputation by a word and without fair trial, has flagrantly, consistently and maliciously (although, no doubt, under cover, perhaps sincere, of "the public interest") been perverting that power in order to impugn the motives and views of individuals whose political and economic ethic does not happen to coincide with that of Mr. Thomas and his colleagues. It is a lamentable and in some respects a dangerous thing that such men have once again been intrusted with such power.

"Nordic" Butter

Great shades of Hitler! Such is the writer's reaction to the statement of Mr. Holman of the National Cooperative Milk Producers Association before Congress in his opposition to the removal of the discriminatory laws against margarine—that such removal would "take away our Nordic civilization." Margarine has indeed come up in the world when it can replace a criminally persecuted race as the scapegoat which allegedly threatens "our Nordic civilization."

Alas for Mr. Holman's Nordic civilization based on butter, it is already lost. Statistics show that margarine is now being used in 82 per cent of American homes. Recent United States Public Health surveys in schools showed that over 40 per cent of children inspected were suffering from dietary deficiencies, a large part of such being vitamin A deficiencies. The 15,000 units of vitamin A per pound with which margarine is fortified considerably exceeds the average in butter through the year, butter exceeding margarine in this respect only when cows are on fresh pasturage. The greater use of cheap margarine instead of butter should in time considerably better these dietary statistics.

Civil Rights Bills

It is a misnomer to call the President's untimely, disruptive and unconstitutional antipoll tax, antisegregation and other antihome rule or antilocal self-government measures "civil rights" bills. They are no more "civil rights" bills than was the antihome rule national prohibition law, which was found to be unenforceable by the Federal Government in States in which a majority of the voters were strongly opposed to such laws. The national prohibition law was repealed and local option laws substituted in many, if not most, of the States.

Russian Encroachment In China

Mr. Y. H. Ho's plea for government reform in China in his letter of March 13, and his placing this before monetary stabilization and the elimination of communism leaves any American observer wondering about the importance of any attempt to help China. If the Chinese Communists have, as Mr. Ho asserts, "established governments more pleasing to the people than is the 'government of the Republic of China,'" then, at least, the yardstick of the Atlantic Charter has been fulfilled.

Perhaps, the Communists represent the "government of their own choosing," laid down in that illustrious document, as the end for which our postwar international policy in China should strive. If the Communists are limiting taxes to 37 per cent we should perhaps be inviting them to this country to show us how it is done, rather than presuming that they are all wrong and should forthwith be liquidated.

Mr. Ho shows no great concern for any encroachment at this stage by the U. S. S. R., and advocates a status quo policy until the Kuomintang, starved into submission by lack of aid from us, retreats below the Yangtze and "has truly effected reforms necessary to regain the confidence of the common citizen." One wonders, however, whether the cure is not worse than the disease.

This plea for government reform in China is nothing new. The forerunners of the present-day Communists were the Taipings, who argued, in a fanatical frenzy of Mohammedan fetish, tempered by half-baked and unassimilated Christian terminology, that the government of that day was in need of reform and proceeded to effect it by the slaughter of millions. The western powers stepped in and ended the debacle. Later, in 1910, Sun Yat-sen revolted against the Manchus and the present civil war ensued. It has now lasted 38 years.

Chiang Kai-shek was forced, after being kidnaped and threatened with death, to agree to fight Japan. A short period of unity ensued as China faced the common enemy. Then, with Japan's defeat, the revolution was continued.

China, it is true, may be menaced by Russian aggression. But I, for one, looking at China in the long light of history, wonder whether Russia's attempts to assimilate might not prove so engrossing over the years that her ambitions in Europe would be entirely forgotten. It was in 1900 that the Kaiser deliberately dangled before the Czar the tempting bait of Far Eastern conquest when he took Shantung. Russia was ready to take Manchuria, France Yunnan, and Britain the Yangtze Valley, but we advanced the Hay Doctrine. Then we helped Japan drive Russia out of Manchuria. Later we watched Japan drive Germany out of Shantung. At the Washington Conference in 1923 we tried to implement the Hay Doctrine and give China her "most unembarrased opportunity" to effect internal reform. Japan upset our efforts a decade later when the "Incident" began.

All the powers who have menaced China in the past are now impotent except Russia. Is China worth defending? Will it not cause Russia so much trouble and cost her so dearly that, weary of her efforts to communize the world, she will eventually subside and leave the rest of the world in peace?

And as for China, I doubt whether a Russian conquest will have any more effect on her than did the incursions of the Mings, the Manchus or the Japanese. Certainly not as much as did the missionaries.

Measuring Candidates

By Malvina Lindsay

Voters' Standards

THE INCREASING prominence of Mrs. Robert A. Taft in her husband's campaign and the new flurry of interest in Gen. Douglas MacArthur's personality and family life raise the question of how much candidates' social and family backgrounds will count in this presidential election.

The candidate himself, of course, is still greatly helped by being human and folksy, or failing this, glamorous, even though the radio has largely come between him and the handshakers. However, his voice tells a lot, and television soon will tell more.

Always the public has looked over his family with an appraising eye. What's more, it has interested itself in his past personal conduct and connections. This sort of thing began as far back as Jefferson when political rivals sought unsuccessfully to make him out a lady killer. Slanders about Andrew Jackson's once-divorced wife, Rachel, hastened her death and she did not enter the White House.

Candidates' religion—or lack of it—also has caused campaign controversy. If a public man was not in his pew regularly, there were whisperings of "infidel." Even in the time of William Howard Taft there was "talk" about the candidate's Unitarianism. Catholicism was a lively issue when Al Smith ran.

MRS. SMITH also was an issue, as indeed have been other candidates' wives. Before Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt these were measured to a large extent by their ability to adorn the White House East Room. Mrs Roosevelt became one of the biggest wife issues the country has known when she revolutionized the First Lady's role. But she was not the first presidential candidate's wife to go into politics. In 1856 Jessie Benton Fremont's picture appeared with that of her husband on campaign posters of the newly organized Republican Party. The caption read "Fremont and our Jessie."

Mrs. Taft is the only wife of a candidate so far to make speeches. But voters are due to become familiar with the sight, both in photograph and the flesh, of the wives and children of other candidates. Every campaign manager is building up his man in the family role, which is still as appealing to voters as in the days of torchlight parades.

Voters today still consider how a presidential candidate's wife will appear in a reception line or at a state dinner, but they also think of what kind of influence she exerts on her husband. They know that no matter how much she may insist on her little woman role, she influences greatly her husband's attitudes and viewpoints.

THIS CAMPAIGN, though, is likely to be less on the personal side than have been most others. The times are too uneasy, the problems too momentous for voters to allow themselves the luxury of wrangling about candidates' wives, children, religion, past peccadilloes. If any candidate can convince them he is a strong man who knows all the answers, they will forgo many personal requirements.

As voters have become more literate and better informed, they have shown less tendency to concern themselves with petty personal gossip and rumor, or the vicious abuse that once led to campaign fist fighting and brawling. They also are less interested in minor personal characteristics. It now seems incredible that Lincoln's opponents made such an issue of his "ugliness" in appearance.

Many of the old standbys of candidates have lost their effectiveness, as the poor country boy background, and the studied old shoe plainness. Party regularity (traced back at least three generations in oratory) is not the vote getter it once was. In fact some campaign managers are wringing their hands over the interest of the public in new faces and in anti-political public figures.

But one personal asset that still holds, one to which American voters always will respond, is that a candidate and his family impart a sense of their democracy of spirit. A snob or a cold fish has no more chance today—with the public at least—than in the past.

"Religion In Schools"

Allow me to congratulate you on having the moral stamina necessary to enable you to write your March 13 editorial, "Religion in Schools."

I consider it especially commendable on your part to write and publish these sentiments at a time when most of the press and radio is full of hysterical denunciations of the action of the Supreme Court.

Most of the comments that I have seen and heard seem to take the attitude that the decision amounted to a forbidding of the teaching of religion—period. Or, as some of the raido commentators treat the matter, an actual denial of the right to worship God.

As a matter of fact, of course, there are really quite a number of patrons of almost all our public schools who, like Mrs. McCollum of Champaign, Ill., do not want any religion taught to their children. Why should such people be taxed to support schools which are used for purposes they are opposed to?

I believe quite firmly in the separation of church and state. The recent Supreme Court decision is an insistence on the alienation of church and state.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

How War Might Come

THE ATMOSPHERE in Washington today is no longer a post-war atmosphere. It is, to put it bluntly, a prewar atmosphere. That is not to say that war with the Soviet Union is necessarily either inevitable or imminent. Yet it is now universally admitted that war within the next few months is certainly possible. For it is believed that some sort of showdown is on the way, that for better or for worse the boil will soon be lanced.

The showdown may come anywhere around the vast Soviet perimeter, and at any time. Yet most observers believe that it is most likely to come in Italy, soon after the Italian elections April 18. What happens in Italy nexth month might lead to some sort of breathing space, at least an armed truce between east and west. Or it might lead to war.

The outcome of the Italian elections, the experts point out, can fall into any one of three categories. It is possible, though unlikely, that the vote for the Communist-controlled "People's Front" will be less than generally anticipated, perhaps below 35 per cent of the total. It is possible, though also unlikely, that the Communist bloc will gain a clear majority. And it is possible, and apparently likely (for this is the result which the Pope, with the Vatican's matchless intelligence service at his disposal, is known to expect) that the pro-Communist vote will be more than 40 per cent of the total vote.

If the Communist bloc polls less than 35 per cent of the vote, the non-Communists headed by the Christian Democrat Alcide de Gasperi will certainly form a government excluding the Communists and their stooges. The Communists could react to such a government by remaining at least temporarily passive. This is not believed probable. They could resort to direct action, on the pattern of last autumn's strikes and Communist-inspired riots. Most observers in Italy believe that De Casperi could deal with this challenge, as he dealt with its last autumn. Or, finally, the Communists could refuse to recognize the outcome of the election, and seize the cities in the north where they are strongest. This would be the signal for civil war.

IF THE Communist bloc wins a clear majority of the vote, the Communist leader, Palmiro Togliatti, using the bought-and-paid-for Socialist Leader Pietri Nenni as his front man, will take all power. Moscow's Politburo will thus become the real master of the Italian people. The mass of Italian non-Communists could accept this outcome. Or they could resist, which would again mean civil war in Italy.

If the Communist bloc wins more than 40 per cent of the vote, as both the Vatican and the American Embassy in Rome anticipate, it will be difficult, and perhaps impossible, for De Gasperi to form a government excluding the Communists. The Communists will certainly demand the key Ministries of War, Justice and Interior. If De Gasperi agrees, that will be the beginning of the end, as recent history has tragically demonstrated. If he refuses, he will be forced into the position of attempting to form a government with the extreme Italian right. The Communists have frequently intimated that in this event their reaction will be to fight—again, a civil war in Italy.

It is some such reasoning as this which has led the experts to conclude that an Italian civil war this spring is, although not certain, by no means improbable, whatever the outcome of the elections. And a civil was in Italy will confront this country with its most crucial decision since the end of World War II.

A CLEAR majority for the Communist bloc in the elections, followed by civil war, would present the United States with an almost impossible moral and political choice. But in the event of a Communist attempt to seize power after polling a minority of the vote, the American course is already fairly clear.

The experts believe that since the Italian army and the carabinieri are both loyal and efficient, a non-Communist Italian government could deal with the Communist partisan army, provided material aid were supplied by the United States. It can be assumed that, unless American foreign policy is suddenly totally reversed, such aid will be forthcoming in case of civil war in Italy. However, the experts believe that if Yugoslavia's Marshal Tito recognizes a "free Italian government" under Togliatti, and sends in Yugoslav troops, either openly or clandestinely, the non-Communists will need more than American supplies They will need American troops. And all the indications are that, rather than see Italy fall to Moscow, American troops will be sent.

At the very least, this would mean direct American participation in a localized war between east and west. At the most—and it is difficult to see how this final catastrophe could be avoided—it would mean a general war between the Soviet Union and the west. That is why the fact must be bluntly faced that war is now a serious possibility. And the real decision (other than a decision to appease, which will surely lead to war in the end) does not lie in Washington. It lies in Moscow, whose creatures, however agile and astute, Togliatti and Tito are.

Loyalty File Ban Arouses Hickenlooper

Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) chairman of the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee, served blunt notice on President Truman yesterday that he will fight his loyalty directive.

The President Tuesday issued instructions to all Federal departments to disregard congressional demands for information gathered during investigations of the loyalty of Federal employes.

Hickenlooper told the Senate he had "no intention of abrogating or giving up the statutory authority" giving the committee access to the records of any Government agency.

He said this authority is contained in a section of the McMahon Atomic Act which delegates to the committee power to use the services, information, facilities and personnel of all of the establishments of the Government.

The Iowan ironically described the President's executive order as "remarkable."

Senator Knowland (R., Calif.), a member of the committee, agreed with Hickenlooper. Knowland told the Senate that under the McMahon Act the committee has "full right" to see the files of any agency, including the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Mr. Truman, in ordering that demands for loyalty information be disregarded, directed that all such requests be referred to him. He said he would assume personal responsibility for disposal of each demand in keeping with "the public interest."

Uncurtailed Monopoly

THE LITTLE band of dictators who run the House Rules Committee have been repeatedly denounced for their action in bottling up the military training bill. These past masters of obstruction are apparently determined that the House shall not even get a chance to vote on the proposal.

Childs

This happens at a time when ominous clouds darken the international sky and when the issue of democracy's workability is to the fore. So the indignation and the concern are understandable.

What is not known is that this same oligarchy is holding back a measure that is in some ways as important as the UMT bill. It is a proposal to close a loophole in the Clayton Antitrust Act. Because of that loophole, monopoly concentration has grown bigger and bigger and the opportunity for small business has grown less and less.

When the Clayton Act was passed in 1914, the method used by big corporations to swallow little corporations was to acquire all the stock of the little fellow. Congress was overwhelmingly in favor of stopping that practice. Therefore this door was shut.

But big business promptly found another way to absorb little business. That was by buying up the assets of the smaller company, a method which had not been specifically banned under the Clayton Act. The O'Mahoney-Kefauver bill would close this door, too.

LAST YEAR extensive hearings on the bill were held before the House Judiciary Committee. Big business sent skilled spokesmen to oppose the measure. One of them was Gilbert H. Montague, a New York lawyer, who is said since to have boasted that he has successfuly buried the bill.

But a majority of the committee—18 to 9—found in favor of closing the door on monopoly. The committee report was written in vigorous approval by Representative John Gwynne of Iowa.

A stanch Republican, Gwynne did not let his partisanship obscure the truth. He believes in the American free-enterprise system and he knows that it cannot be free if it is nine tenths monopoly. After showing how concentration of industry has grown by leaps and bounds since the end of the war, Gwynne said in conclusion:

"This proposal is in no sense antagonistic to so-called big business. Its contribution to the national welfare, both in peace and war, is recognized by all. Nevertheless, big business, too, has a tremendous stake in the maintenance of competition—without which capitalism cannot survive. The only alternative to capitalism is some form of statism—destruction alike to both big and small business. The concentration of great economic power in a few corporations necessarily leads to the formation of large Nation-wide labor units. The development of the two necessarily leads to big bureaus in the Government to deal with them.

"NOR SHOULD we forget that 'man does not live by bread alone.' In the choice between competition and monopoly, between real labor unions and a system of dominating, racketeering overlordship, between opportunity for youth to chart its own course as against a mere job for some far-distant master, between many thriving small towns and a few large cities, between local government and bureaucracy, between freedom and dictatorship—between these choices lie many questions involving great moral and spiritual values which cannot be safely ignored."

The Republican majority on the Rules Committee put the bill and the Gwynne report in a convenient pigeonhole. And there it has stayed ever since.

From time to time, Senator Joseph O'Mahoney of Wyoming, one of the sponsors of the bill, has tried to prod the oligarchy into action. But his efforts have met with small success. They have been ignored by Rules Committee Chairman Leo Allen of Illinois and his fellow potentates, who bar the portal that gives access to the floor of the House. And Senator O'Mahoney's efforts have also been ignored by press and public.

I said that this measure seemed to me to be as important as the UMT bill, which enjoys the same fate. Reasonable military power, whether through universal training or a greatly expanded Air Force, is essential to national security. That means decision and action, not stalling and mere talk.

But freedom here at home means decision and action, too. If nothing is done, the end will be total monopoly—which is to say, the totalitarian state. Closing the door on monopoly concentration is no cure-all. It is, however, one important step in the direction that the Nation must move if freedom at home is to be safeguarded.

The Gallup Poll

Majority Expect Lower Prices, No Pay Rise in Next 6 Months

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., March 16.—Here is how the American people size up the economic situation facing the Nation in the months just ahead:

1. The weight of opinion among adults in the country is that prices will be lower six months from now than they are today. Only one person in seven thinks that prices for the things he buys will be higher at the end of a half year.

2. Three out of four people do not foresee any general increase in wage rates during the same period. As a matter of fact, 6 out of 10 believe that wages will hold steady at present levels.

3. The average American definitely is not gloomy about the immediate future of his Nation's economy. An overwhelming majority predict that there will be no serious business depression in the next 12 months. Only one in four thinks a depression will occur within the next two years.

4. As the stage is being set for a third round of wage negotiations in major industries, a majority of adults with opinions on the matter believe that a new general increase should not be granted.

In a number of previous polls conducted by the Institute the public has pointed to the high cost of living as the biggest problem facing the United States. To test today's economc hopes and beliefs of the population, field reporters have just completed a survey covering all sections of the country. These were the questions they asked:

PRICES

Do you think that prices, in general, will be higher, lower, or about the same six months from now?

Higher	14%
Lower	39
Same	36
No opinion	11

WAGES

Do you think wage rates, in general, will be higher, lower, or about the same six months from now?

Higher	15%
Lower	13
Same	62

DEPRESSION

Do you think there will be a serious business depression in the United States this year?

No	72%
Yes	9
No opinion	19

A separate but comparable cross-section of adults was asked the same question except that the time limit was given as "in two years." Their answers were:

No	52%

NEW WAGE INCREASES

Many unions of factory workers are going to ask for a pay increase within the next month or two. Do you think these factory workers should get more pay?

Should get increase	34%
Should not get increase	45
Qualified	5
Don't know	16

The principle qualification on the wage increase question were: "depends on living conditions" and "depends on current wages."

Yugoslavia Gets U. S. Rebuke on Horthy Protest

Secretary Marshall rebuked yesterday for protesting against the presence of Hungary's exiled former regent at a wedding in the American occupation zone of Germany.

Marshall said in a note that a guest list for a private social function is "not a matter for representations on the part of the Yugoslav government."

The former regent, Admiral Nicholas Horthy, attended the wedding in a Bavarian castle last month of sam Woods, then American consul-general at Munich.

Yugoslavia, in a protest submitted March 3, called Horthy a "war criminal."

Marshall's not was delivered to Ambassador Sava N. Kosanovic. Horthy has been a refugee in the American zone in Germany since Hungary abolished its 100-year-old monachy early in 1946.

Ruml Defends Bond Support At Par Level

By S. Oliver Goodman

Beardsley Ruml, former chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, predicted here last night that the Federal Reserve will continue to support Government bonds at or about par indefinitely, both in time and in amount.

RUML

A sharp break or a long slow retreat in bond prices "is not in the picture," he told the Washington Board of Trade at a dinner meeting last night in the Hotel Statler.

Ruml, who is chairman of R. H. Macy & Co., Inc., of New York, also saw little chance of Government bonds again commanding high premiums. "I would not expect large premiums to occur without sales of long-term bonds by the Federal Reserve to the market."

Discussing "The Interest Rate Problem," Ruml stated his belief that the established 2½ per cent rate on long-term marketable Government bonds will be maintained.

Ruml cited these as "good reasons" for the support policy:

By stabilizing interest rates on Government borrowing, it insures financing of the national debt at "reasonable and predictable cost to the taxpayer."

It protects owners of Government bonds from serious slumps and fluctuations in their market value.

It lends stability to private interest rates and thereby can "contribute to the confidence of business planning."

"The reasons for the support program," he concluded, "seem to me to be good reasons . . . They justify cooperation with the fiscal authorities by banks, by businessmen and the public generally. We should impose voluntary restraints on inflationary conduct and at the same time continue to do business in an orderly way with an orderly use of the credit facilities that a modern economy provides."

RECORD SALES: Washington Gas Light Co. reported record February sales of 21,762,899 therms, an increase of 35.5 per cent over the same 1947 month. The gain was attributed to colder weather, more new customers and an extra day in February. For the first two months this year, gas sales totaled 42,250,062 therms, a gain of 36.5 per cent over the like 1947 period.

Zoning Law May Force Clinic Removal

Alexandria's Mental Health Clinic may have to move from its new office in nearby Fairfax County because of the county's zoning ordinance.

The clinic moved into the Nellie Brown House in Wellington Villa last December. The county zoning administrator permitted the move because of a provision in the ordinance allowing a physician to have his office in his home.

On protests from residents that the move might afford an opening wedge for commercial development, however, the zoning office investigated and reported it found the doctor did not live in the house—a secretary did, but not the doctor.

Zoning Administrator T. J. Stockton ruled the clinic must vacate and yesterday the board of zoning appeals upheld Stockton's ruling.

Clinic supporters said they would appeal their case to the board of county supervisors, the last resort outside of the courts.

Soap Sent to French Town

Luray, Va., March 16 (Spl.).—A shipment of 50 pounds of soap and shortening has been sent to the French town of Luray by local residents who have unofficially "adopted" the war-torn village. The shipment, sponsored by the World Citizenship Council, was delayed for several weeks due to difficulty in obtaining an export license.

Appellate Judges to Extend Sittings in Civil Jury Cases

Three appellate judges of the Municipal Court who have been sitting as regular judges to clear up a backlog of civil jury cases will continue their program through March 31.

Chief Judge Nathan Cayton announced that almost half of the backlog has been cleared up already. The program was originally scheduled to end on March 16.

The drive to clean up the cases which began on February 14 originally called for four judges to be assigned to the campaign. However a fifth judge was added and with the assistance of the other judges of the court 297 cases have been disposed of.

The program was initiated after a meeting on January 30 of the judges with the District Bar Association Committee on relations with the court.

Those judges specially assigned to clear up the cases are Municipal Court of Appeals Judges Nathan Cayton, Brice Clagett and Andrew M. Hood, and Municipal Court Judges George P. Barse and Walter J. Casey.

She pointed out to the middies that women in the United States "control 90 per cent of the purchasing power, 70 per cent of wealth and have a direct influence on almost everything that men do."

Dental Decay Laid to 'Too Civilized' Diet

The average American child has six cavities that are not filled for every one that is, a dentist said yesterday, blaming both his own profession and the children's parents for the situation.

Dr. Frank W. Nash, Scranton, Pa., one of the clinic leaders at the D. C. Dental Society's postgraduate clinic, being held at the Shoreham Hotel, declared the outstanding reason for theincreasing dental decay is the diet of the American child in the American family, which he termed "too civilized."

Foods most responsible for such conditions, he asserted, are sugar—consumption of which has risen from 40 pounds per person a year 100 years ago, to about 150 pounds—such refined starchy foods as white bread, pie and cake, and soft drinks, which contain considerable sugar.

In addition, he told dentists attending his clinic, "there is very little chewing required for many of the items that we eat." This, he said, produces defects in development which increase susceptibility to decay.

However, said Dr. Nash, correction of the diet would not correct all dental ills, and children could have better teeth if they received more dental care.

About 2600 dentists had registered yesterday at the sessions, which will continue today and tomorrow with discussions, clinics, visual aid programs and commercial exhibits.

Don Pryor, CBS foreign and Washington correspondent, told a luncheon meeting of the D. C. Dental Hygienists Association he believed the United States is now in a position to make its foreign policy work through the proposed union of western European states and the Marshall Plan. He warned against war hysteria.

On the Town

THIS WEEK marks the seventh anniversary of Olivia Davis' ownership of the Merry-Land Club and in commemoration Olivia has booked Erskine Butterfield, the lowdown blues boy of the piano. . . Miss Davis got her start as a bookkeeper for the old Crescent Cafe some years ago and worked diligently at the task of mastering the complex and all too often unprofitable restaurant business . . . In 1940 she had a chance to design and set up the Merry-Land Club and she's been there ever since, doing very well . . . You might credit the friendly manner of everyone in the club, the continually good entertainment, or just good management. At any rate, the spot is now celebrating its seventh anniversary and contemplating many more.

Olivia Davis

The new Town and Country cocktail lounge at the Mayflower opened with quite a flurry last week . . . The room is beautifully decorated in a sophisticated manner, the only suggestion of country being in the vines placed along the walls of the room . . . If we can judge by the past four or five days, the room should be a tremendous success.

Dona Mason at the King Coal Room is teaming up with another bit of local talent in the person of Lee Vickers, a radio announcer at WTOP . . . Seems that Lee can write songs and Dona can sing 'em, a fact that she's going to prove before Friday by singing Lee's new song "Starlight and You."

A SAD note in last week's events was the death of Ciro Gallotti, owner of Ciro's Village Restaurant. Ciro, the "unofficial mayor of G st.," was a great favorite with diners out for over 20 years.

Club Cairo is holding Cliff 'Ukelele Ike' Edwards and the whole show over for another week . . . A new note, in this club at least, will be a cocktail hour every Monday night during which instructors from the Arthur Murray studio will give dance exhibitions.

The Anchor Room in the Annapolis Hotel is featuring a bit of triple threat entertainment now. The triple threat boy is Don Mackin, who before the war was the leader of a rather prominent society orchestra in New York . . . During a five year trick as a truck commander, Don always managed to have a piano nearby when it came time to stop, and did a bit of extracurricular work by entertaining the fellows in his and other outfits. Don is a new resident of Washington and hopes to make it his home.

Joint Fares For Service Units Favored

The present joint fares for passengers transferring between streetcars and buses in the District and Virginia buses serving Army and Navy installations would be continued under an examiner's recommendation to the ICC.

The joint fare transfer arrangement was set up in 1945 by the Capital Transit Co., the W V & M and the AB & W, so that riders could buy 12 one-way trips for $1.60.

The fares are good for rides between Washington and such points as the Pentagon, Navy and Air Force Annexes, National Airport and intermediate stops, over the three lines.

The companies involved petitioned the ICC for permission to drop the joint fare arrangement and charge a straight 10-cent fare on each line, contending the transfer system was not profitable.

Examiner H. G. Cummings, recommended that the lines "should be required to continue in effect both join and local fares in issue." The present division of fares amounts to 7.5 cents for the Virginia lines and 5.83 cents for Capital Transit on each one-way fare.

Exceptions to the recommendation are expected to be filed by the companies involved. Capital Transit Co. has also appealed to a Federal statutory court against the ICC's refusal to honor the company's notice of intention to discontinue the joint fare arrangement.

E. C. Giddings, Capital Transit vice president, said yesterday a District Public Utilities Commission order provides for a fare of not less than 10 cents within the District.

Dupont Circle Traffic Flow Satisfactory

District traffic authorities expresed growing satisfaction last night with traffic flow at "squared" Dupont Circle after making two changes to ease rush-hour congestion there.

George E. Keneipp, director of vehicles and traffic, said he rerouting, instituted Monday because of construction of the Dupone Circle underpass, worked better yesterday because of the changes.

A traffic light was set up at 18th and Q sts. nw. and the one-way designation for 18th st. was extended another block north to S st.

If wetaher permits today, Keneipp said, three lanes will be marked on 18th st. in the vicinity of Massachusetts ave. In this area, he noted on Monday, motorists tended to crowd the right side of the newly designated one-way street, thus failing to utilize all available room.

Deputy Traffic Director Wallace L. Braun said traffic moved "satisfacorily" during last night's homeward rush. Both he and Keneipp were certain, they said, that with increasing familiarity of motorists with the new system, traffic would soon move no less freely than at Dupont Circle before the change.

Rep. Fallon Seeks A Third Term

Baltimore, March 16 (AP).—Representative George H. Fallon, Democratic congressman from the Fourth Maryland District, today announced his candidacy for renomination.

Fallon said his efforts for a third term would be made "on the basis of my record." His district lies entirely within Baltimore City. The primaries will be held May 3.

Sidney R. Traub, former city councilman; Philemon B. Coulter, attorney, and Leo H. McCormick, wartime State director of the OPA, already have filed for the Democratic nomination.

1947 Relief Costs In Arlington Totaled $120,066

Arlington County's Department of Public Welfare disbursed $120,066.60 in six categories of public assistance during 1947, Supt. John G. Howell reported yesterday.

Howell said the disbursements iniluded $48,927.50 for old-age assistance, aid to the blind and aid to dependent children, the three programs in which both Federal and State governments participate; $15,778.20 for regular foster care, provided by a combination of State and county funds; $31,618.44 for general relief and $23,742.46 for administration.

According to the superintendent, Community Chest funds constitute a small proportion of the total budget. The Chest funds are used, he said, to provide assistance in cases where applicants are not eligible for aid furnished through tax funds.

Owners Assail Rezoning Plea for Apartment

A Washington builder attempting to clear the way for erection of an $800,000 apartment house in Chevy Chase, Md., yesterday ran into stiff opposition at a zoning hearing held by the Montgomery Commissioners.

Approximately 20 property owners of the exclusive Farmington subdivision and vicinity said they were strongly opposed to the request of John H. Bacas, 1120 8th st. se., for rezoning from residential A to C of a six-acre tract at Jones Mill and Jones Bridge rds.

Attorney for the petitioner was Roger J. Whiteford who told the Commissioners his client sought the rezoning because of their recent favorable action on a similar request by Chevy Chase Land Co. on a nearby tract.

Whiteford said Bacas plans a 154-unit, garden-type development on the tract if the rezoning is approved. Opponents protested approval of the project on the ground the neighborhood now includes only single-family dwellings and the proposed apartment project would lower property values.

Attorney for the protesting property owners was John L. Laskey, a resident of Farmington. Included in the protesting delegation were former Senator Gerald P. Nye and L. H. Woolsey, former State Department official.

The petition was one of three heard by the Commissioners and taken under advisement.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

TAMPA, FLA., March 16.—Over at St. Pete, 20 miles away, the flash bulbs were hopping on the Yankee's bench. If the Yankees didn't feel they were being honored by the presence of the husky redheaded, sport-jacketed fellow with the dark glasses, at least the photographers considered him a topical subject. Larry MacPhail was back in camp.

POVICH

He doesn't own a nickel's worth in the Yankees any more, but he's not easily forgetable as the stormiest front-office character in the business. Among the Yankees there was no great display of cordiality toward MacPhail, but Manager Bucky Harris did greet him warmly. Harris always did have an affection for the fellow, and a very proper one inasmuch as MacPhail brought him out of the minor leagues and set him up with a nice two-year contract to manage the Yankees at $35,000 a year.

There isn't much chance that MacPhail will get back into baseball and why should he? He pulled out of the business with a net $1,200,000 for his interest in the Yankees after taxes were deducted. It was all profit from an original $400,000 investment which he got on loan. Nobody has to weep for him. He won't become a public charge, you'd have to say.

MacPHAIL'S MIDAS touch doesn't stop at baseball. He likes to take a fling at the ponies, too. There's no record that he has made any regular killings, but you couldn't say he was exactly unlucky. He was sunning himself on the beach at Miami the other day when he decided he might get some action on the horses. The total assets in his beach clothes amounted to only $19, but he borrowed a dollar from Mrs. MacPhail, made a $20 bet and ran it up to $1100 by the day's end.

Not an unlucky fellow, you'd have to say, but there's no doubt about his promotional talents. He moved up from a minor league operator to the general management of the Cincinnati Reds, got them out of the red by originating night baseball in the majors and then moved on to Brooklyn as club president, at the invitation of the banks which were scary of their investment in the Dodgers and recognized the genius of MacPhail.

He made good at Brooklyn with his promotions and bailed the banks out by winning a pennant and left the club in excellent shape financially when he left to accept a colonelcy in the Army, to which he was no stranger. His attempt to capture the Kaiser almost single-handedly in the last war was a flop, but he did a massive sort of job in the most recent war with his contract-dealing for the Army Air Force.

IT WAS AS Colonel MacPhail that he encountered Del Webb, the millionaire builder who had vast business with the Army, and was baseball minded by virtue of having been a pitcher in the Coast League in his youth. MacPhail was the first to whisper into the ear of Webb that the Yankees could be bought from the Ruppert estate at a bargain, because of the tax situation of the Ruppert heirs.

Webb went into the deal with Dan Topping and they cut MacPhail in for a one-third share plus a $50,000 salary as president. MacPhail had no ready cash like his rich partners but they did agree to let him pay for his share out of the club's profits, and MacPhail quickly made it very profitable. Despite more than one million dollars worth of park improvements that he made, the Yankee owners got all their money back within three years as all attendance records shattered.

Eventually the partnership blew up, with MacPhail making a clubhouse scene at the end of the victorious World Series last October, and then announcing his retirement. Webb and Topping first read him out of the Yankee combine, and then bought him out for two million dollars. Webb didn't like him at the finish, but previously he had praised MacPhail as "one of the smartest businessmen I've ever known."

IT HAS BEEN suggested that MacPhail apply his promotional genius to the St. Louis Browns and bring them out of the ruck both financially and competitively. He has waved the whole idea down, but it does represent a challenge for him and it could be perhaps his greatest baseball triumph.

But right now he seems content with his new role as master of his Bel Air, Md., farm where he breeds the black Angus bulls for the trade and is making a showplace of his establishment. Lately he has gone into the race horse business, and last October he bought three mares in foal from the Alf Vanderbilt farm.

MacPhail's luck has held up in that direction, too. Already two of the mares in foal to such prized sires as Discovery and First Fiddle have dropped colts—not fillies, but colts. The third foal is by Discovery, and if that, too, is a colt, MacPhail will be solidly in the racing business by 1950.

Cincinnati Fails to Score On Haefner, Scarborough

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Tampa, Fla., March 16.—Early Wynn flunked his first exhibition game test of the season in a loud way today and the Cincinnati Reds smacked the Nats down, 9 to 2, before 1500 slightly bored customers at Fair Grounds Park.

The Reds assaulted Wynn for 10 hits in the three innings he pitched and removed all the struggle from the game with six runs in the third inning.

The Reds' blows against Wynn were well-kissed, no duty pecks. They swatted him for a double, a triple and seven solid singles. The Nats were throwing their best pitcher at the Reds but he was pitching and ducking in the same motion.

What good pitching the Nats did exhibit was too late. Mickey Haefner followed Wynn to the mound and shut the Reds out for three innings, and Ray Scarborough finished the game with a pair of scoreless innings. The Reds' swatting totaled 16 hits, however, to the Nats' nine.

Five Nats Whiff

Howie Fox, a tallish right-hander up from Syracuse, pitched the first five innings for the Reds, didn't give up a run until the fourth, and made the Nats look exceedingly futile in striking out five.

Wynn wasted no time getting licked. He walked two men in the first inning and gave up three runs when Ted Kluszewski, Ray Lamanno and Ben Zientara followed with hot singles.

But they really went townward against Wynn in the third. He didn't retire the side until 11 batters faced him. Lamanno tripled, and Zientara and Sallcup singled before he could get anybody out. A bit later, Hatton singled and Kluzewski doubled. And a couple of walks also figured in the scoring. Wynn did not appear to be overexerting himself, however, rarely showing his fast ball.

Yost Connects

Mickey Vernon tripled to open the fourth and scored on a single to left by Eddie Yost, and they represented the Nats only run until the eighth. The other run yielded by Southpaw Kent Peterson commenced with a single by Rookie Dean Stafford to right, and was climaxed by Sherry Robertson's triple to deep center as Wyrostek misjudged a fly.

The Nats and Reds were playing in the park where Babe Ruth hit the longest home run in history, but his record was in no danger today, even with the wind blowing out . . . Leon Culberson, who reported late and has seen no action as yet, is due to take over the center field job for the Nats tomorrow . . . Al Kozar has been no wow at bat as yet, nor has anybody else on the Washington club . . . Sherry Robertson was the only regular to play the whole game for the Nats today. Manager Joe Kuhel wants him to see plenty of pitching before the season opens . . . Robertson singled nicely in the second inning but in the eighth his triple was a gift from Centerfielder Johnny Wyrostek who played him too close . . . The football-minded Nats saw a familiar face in Doc Wilbur Bohm, former trainer of the Redskins who is now boss trainer of the Cincinnati club . . . The Nats will play two games tomorrow, with the regulars meeting the Phillies at Orlando, and the B squad playing Minneapolis at Sanford.

Hickman Is Coach At Yale

HERMAN HICKMAN

Army Loses Its Husky Line Tutor

New Haven, Conn., March 16 (AP).—Yale University announced today the appointment of Herman Hickman as head football coach. Since 1943, Hickman has been line coach for the United States Military Academy eleven.

Hickman succeeds Howard Odell, who resigned in January to become head coach at the University of Washington.

Director of Athletics J. H. (Bob) Kiphuth, in making the announcement, said that Hickman's appointment is for a three-year period. Hickman will report in time to take charge of Yale's spring practice, Kiphuth said.

"We at Yale are delighted," Kiphuth said, "to obtain a coach with the vast fund of experience which Hickman has. We feel he is the most outstanding man in the field of football coaching."

Hickman was an All-America guard at Tennessee. After his graduation in 1932, he played for the Brooklyn Dodgers of the National League and was All-League guard for three years.

He started his coaching career at Wake Forest in 1935 as an assistant to Jim Weaver. The following year he was line coach under William Newton at North Carolina State where he remained five years.

He obtained leave of absence from this position in 1942 to become line coach of the Army All-Star team which played three wartime benefit games, returning to North Carolina State in October of that year.

The massive Hickman was appointed to the West Point staff by Col. Earl Blaik in 1943 and has been there ever since.

The United States Military Academy announced Hickman had been released from his contract so he might accept the Yale post.

Hickman is Yale's twenty-eighth gridiron mentor since Walter Camp, often referred to as the father of American college football, took charge here in 1888.

Hickman, who played an important part in the installation of the T-formation at West Point in 1943, indicated tonight that Yale will use the same system this fall which the Military Academy team employed in winning three successive national championships.

Need 3 More

Caps Keep Hope Alive; Win, 76-62

Boston, Mass., March 18.—Piling up a 20-8 first quarter lead, the Washington Capitols easily trounced the Boston Celtics, 76-62, heer tonight.

That opening period surge was too much for the Celtics, who played on almost even terms with the Caps for the final three periods. The Caps led at halftime, 41-25, and held a third quarter margin of 50-36.

By winning, the Caps gained a half game on the third place Baltimore Bullets, who were idle tonight. They now trail Baltimore by one and one-half games. Washington plays Providence at home tomorrow night and can further narrow the Bullets' lead with a victory over the Rollers.

Caps Must Beat Providence Tonight

The Washington Capitols return to Uline Arena tonight to meet the lowly Providence Steamrollers in a Basketball Association of America contest that the Caps must win to stay in the running for a playoff berth.

Tomorrow night, the Caps have a chance to gain a full game on the Baltimore Bullets in Baltimore.

Providence has been easy for all the league teams, the Caps included. But every so often the downtrodden Steamrollers rise up and knock somebody off.

The Caps know that they are on the verge of elimination for a playoff spot. Unless they win all three of their remaining games, their chances aren't very good.

Cards Halt Yankee String at Eight, 4-1

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 16 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals defeated the New York Yankees, 4-1, in an exhibition game today, snapping an eight-game winning streak.

Spud Chandler, who had an elbow operation last fall, made his 1948 debut and said his arm felt good. But he yielded six hits and three runs in three innings and was charged with the loss.

The American Leaguers were limited to seven hits by Al Papai, John Grodzicki and Ted Wilks. The Cards collected 13 blows off Chandler, Allie Reynolds and Joe Page.

The hits off Chandler included two doubles by Enos Slaughter, a triple by Dick Sisler and a home run by Rookie Don Lang.

Meanwhile, an X-ray examination of Yogi Berra's foot, injured yesterday, showed the Yankee catcher had no fracture, but will be out at least a week. Tommy Henrich, injured right fielder, will be idle 10 days.

Successives singles by Danny Litwiler, Tommy Holmes and Frank Kerr brought in the winning tally, after Virgil Trucks had held the National Leaguers runless with two hits from the sixth through the thirteenth inning.

Ruth Still Has Dead Aim On Earnshaw

Clearwater, Fla., Mar. 16 (AP). His health may be failing but his humor is still up to par.

Babe Ruth dropped in at the Phillies training camp and spotted George Earnshaw, the former Philadelphia Athletics righthander, and now farm coach for the Phils.

"Hello Cuz," rasped the Babe.

"Forget that cousin stuff," Earnshaw replied. "I could strike you out left handed the best day you ever saw."

"Yeah, that's why I used to send a taxicab to the Almanac Hotel the day you were gonna pitch," said Ruth. "I never wanted you to get lost in the subway going to the stadium."

Witucki Joins GW Coach List

Another name, Bernie Witucki, was added yesterday to the list of prospects for the George Washington University football coaching post.

Max Farrington, GW director of athletics, said yesterday he planned to get in touch with Witucki, former Colonial lineman, now that the Indiana job has been given Clyde B. Smith. Witucki presently is coach at Memorial High School, Evansville, Ind.

Witucki, who has had outstanding success as a high school coach at South Bend and Evansville, was considered one of the top three applicants for Bo McMillin's job at Indiana.

Farrington said, "Witucki hasn't applied for the position here, but we've been aware of his fine record that includes several Indiana State championships. With Indiana having made its coaching selection, we now may be able to interest Witucki in coming to GW."

Farrington admitted that GW was no closer in filling its vacancy than when Skip Stahley announced his resignation. "If anything, we're farther away," he said.

Dick Fennell Wins to Gain AAU Finals

Novice 175-pounder Dick Fennell, all-prep football center at St. John's stole the show from the more experienced boxers at last night's District AAU tournament at Turner's Arena.

Fennell, representing Merrick Club scored a three round TKO victory over Al Young, Olympic AC, to gain the finals, which take place March 25.

Jabbing nicely with his left, Fennell drew blood from Young's nose early in the second. At the end of the second, Fennell trapped Young in a neutral corner, and pummeled him so badly that the Olympic battler couldn't answer the bell for the third round.

As expected, Dave Primrose, 118 pound Golden Gloves champion, moved to the finals with a close decision over Joe Thompson of Randall AC.

Pat Thomas, runner up in the AAU 126 pound senior division last year, gained the semifinals as he rallied in the last round to outpoint Eddie Funk, a former champion from Southwest Barney House. Thomas was repersenting Apollo AC.

The paid attendance of 491 contributed a gross of $813.40 and a net of $593.25.

Hoyas Hockey Team Blanked

Georgetown University's hockey forces suffered their only shutout of the season last night at Uline Arena as the New York Athletic Club romped to an 8-0 victory before 700.

Six NYAC goals in the opening period put the game out of Georgetown's reach and accounted for its third loss in seven matches.

Goalie Joe Gately, despite the Hoya loss, proved the star of the evening. His brilliant saves kept the New Yorkers scoreless in the second period and allowed them a single goal in the final. Sub George Hamliton was charged with the invaders' other point in the last three minutes.

Pete Taylor and Gene McDonough each tallied twice for New York and single markers went to Jim Vaith, Ken Braun, Jack Klements and George Copeland.

Georgetown's only serious bid for a goal came in the last period but produced nothing but his first real exercise for Goalie E. Beardon.

Smith, 42 years old, has been coaching at La Crosse Teachers since 1938. He played football in college under McMillin when he was grid boss at Geneva (Pa.) College.

He also was under the tutelage of McMillin during his tenure as line coach of the Hoosiers from 1934 through 193". He came to Indiana after a five-year coaching job at the Red Stone High School in Republic, Pa. He played football in high school at Monongahela, Pa.

Williams Bats In Four Runs

Sarasota, Fla., March 16 (AP).—Ted Williams drove in four of Boston's runs today and the fifth scored on an error as the Red Sox defeated the visiting Philadelphia Phillies, 5-2, in an inter league exhibition ball game.

The Kid's long double over Centerfielder Harry Walker's head in the opening inning scored Dom DiMaggio, who had scratched an infield hit, and Sam Mele, who had walked.

Fairfax Boxers In National Meet

Two Fairfax High boys will compete under the "unattached" label in the National Interscholastic Boxing Tournament Friday and Saturday at Charlottesville, Va.

They are Warren Roseberry in the 145-pound class and Monte Burns, 125. Since the tournament is not sanctioned by the National Federation of High School Athletics, Fairfax, a member organization, could not enter a team. Roseberry and Burns were allowed by tournament officials to compete unattached.

Jackson Slated To Face Vigeant

Stonewall Jackson, the Phelps High welterweight, will face Frankie Vigeant of Hartford, Conn., in the 10-round feature bout at Turner's Arena Monday night.

Jackson's recent efforts include wins over Willie Cheathan and Willard Coffey in Baltimore and a loss to Johnny Williams.

In 10 bouts during 1947 Vigeant was kayoed twice, lost three decisions, won three decisions and fought to a pair of draws.

—Ted's Latest Observation—

Williams Admits McCarthy's 'No Green Hand' as Manager

By Joe Reichler

Sarasota, Fla., March 16 (AP).—Ted Williams gazed fondly at his yellow-painted 36-ounce hickory bat, took a few healthy swipes at an imaginary baseball and came up with not one but half a dozen fresh observations today.

The Boston Red Sox's triple-crown king in 1947 took a deep breath and voiced the following:

1—American League pitchers will be tougher to hit than ever in 1948.

2—The league's leading batter probably won't hit .350.

3—Boston, New York, Detroit and Cleveland will engage in one of the closest pennant races in history.

4—Joe McCarthy can't help but be a success in Boston because he is "a wonderful manager and knows how to get the most out o fhis players."

5—The opposing clubs will continue to use the "Boudreau shift" on him but he will break it up by hitting to left more than ever.

6—He should be more valuable to the Red Sox than ever because he has learned that baseball consists of more than just hitting.

Ted said he and McCarthy have gotten along admirably. "Why not?" he demanded. "Joe's no green hand at this managing end, you know."

Ted declined to guess what he would hit this year, but predicted that if he could reach his .343 batting average of last year, he probably would win the championship again.

Williams is satisfied with the way he combated the "Boudreau shift" last year.

"I led the league, didn't I?" was his answer to the question as to whether the shift affected his hitting.

NYU Opposes St. Louis for Title Tonight

Winner Will Get Chance For Olympics

New York, March 16 (AP).—With one of the eight berths in the Olympic basketball tryouts already filled, a second will be allotted tomorrow night (at 9:30 p. m. EST) when St. Louis University collides with New York University in the finals of the National Invitation Tournament.

These two collegiate quintets shot their way into the title match last night, St. Louis eliminating Western Kentucky, 60-53, and NYU dropping DePaul of Chicago, 72-59.

The championship affair at Madison Square Garden shapes up as a duel between two well-drilled clubs, both led by towering centers who rank among the country's best.

Two Good Centers

Ed McCauley, 6-foot 8-inch St. Louis pivot man, and Adolph Schayes, the NYU standout at 6-foot-7, were highly instrumental in their semi-final triumphs.

Both have led their respective clubs in scoring through the season. Schayes recently was selected as the outstanding player in the Metropolian area and McCauley was named the best visiting player to appear here this year.

Preceding the NYU-St. Louis tussle, Western Kentucky and DePaul will battle for third place in the tournament.

Louisville Already In

The tournament champion authomatically goes into the Olympic tryouts on the same side of the bracket as Louisville, which qualified for the trials opening here March 27 by winning the NAIB tourney at Kansas City last week.

Other places in the Olympic field will be determined by the outcome of the national AAU tournament, now under way at Denver; the NCCA playoffs scheduled at Kansas City and New York later this week, and the national YMCA tournament opening Thursday in Brooklyn.

Spring Is Here!

Car Credit football team, 1947 champion of the Andy Farkas League, will open spring practice next Sunday at 1:30 p. m. at Edgewood Playground.

Les Learns New Game--Positively

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

OUR FAMILY POKER game this week returned to the White House—Dick White's house, that is.

Haight

Last week our women, in answer to suggestions that we wanted an all-male game, went on strike, leaving the men to their own card devices. Frankly, the boys didn't like the setup and neither did the gals for that matter.

Came poker time—chips counted and ash trays distributed—and their was no need for a mediation board or a Supreme Court ruling. Wasn't long before all hands were back in the groove and orthodox poker gave way as usual to spit-in-the-ocean, baseball, follow-the-queen, etc.

The game began rather quietly but, long before the pickles, potato chips, etc., came on the scene, the noise reached the point of normalcy.

Only the silent butler was calm and collected.

At first, I thought the women might have lost their luck during their strike, but it wasn't long before they were raising like mad and the men were going bad, particularly Uncle Les.

AFTER TWO HOURS poor Les hadn't won a pot.

Aunt Agatha beat his four aces with five deuces and Les moaned, "Can't do a thing. That's the tenth time I've been close."

Agatha proved she was on the beam by reaching for the chips and remarking, "That's too bad, Honey, but close doesn't count in poker. We're not pitching horseshoes, you know."

Les continued to lose. Cousin Hilda received unanimous consent to give him two extra cards down in low-hole-card. He lost because he had three wild fours in the hole and went under with a deuce.

I'll have to give Les credit for trying.

He played just about every game in and out of the book and invented new ones in an attempt to change his luck.

Perhaps the height of card playing was reached when he designated all red cards wild—and he ended up with a fist full of black ones.

THE FOOD CAME and went—some on the floor and some on the cards—and it was getting late.

Les was about to deal and he muttered, "Let's see. What'll I play this time? I've tried just about everything——"

Jen, his better half, broke in with, "Why don't you play Positively?"

"Never heard of it," replied Les.

"Wake up," came back Jen, "it's time to go home, so make this POSITIVELY the last deal."

Versatile Gil Bogley Plays In All-Star Game Saturday

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

One of these days when he's playing in a hot basketball game, young Gilbert Bogley is going to whip out a tennis racquet and paddle one of his foes on top of the head.

It's a wonder he hasn't done that already.

Since mid-December, Gil has been playing basketball for Landon School on weekdays and competing in national junior and men's tennis tournaments on weekends.

He does a reverse this week. He began by advancing to the third round before losing out in the national men's indoor single tennis tourney in New York. He returned to Washington last night to join the All-Prep basketball team which is practicing for Saturday afternoon's Scholastic All-Star game at Uline Arena.

So far, the combination of tennis and basketball hasn't hurt the 16-year-old Gil in either sport.

He played excellent tennis in the New York meet, bowling over the veterans Igor Cassini and J. Gilbert Hall before bowing to third-seeded Ed McGrath.

This has also been his best basketball season. He netted 240 points for a 16-game average of 15 points. He was the chief reason why Landon tied St. Albans for the Interstate Athletic Conference championship.

At Landon, Bogley is considered somewhat of an All-American boy.

Besides starring in tennis and basketball, Gil hit .350 as second baseman on the baseball team, and would have been the passing halfback on the football team hadn't Coach Jim Graham thought the sport might hurt his tennis career.

Gil is no slouch scholastically either. He ranks second in the senior class with an A minus average, good enough to insure his admission to Princeton in September.

Gil will be offering a helping hand to the Boys Club work fund when he plays in his last schoolboy basketball game Saturday. All proceeds go to the fund. Tickets, priced at $1.25 and 60 cents are on sale at all public high schools, Gonzaga, St. John's, Touchdown Club, Sports Center, Andy Farkas' Sports Shop, the Boys Club and Uline Arena.

Illinois Board Bans Boxing For 23 Days

Chicago, March 16 (AP).—The Illinois Athletic Commission will ban boxing in the State for 23 days in accord with a request from Gov. Dwight H. Green.

Governor Green asked for the shutdown pending adoption of measures to prevent ring fatalities. Commission Chairman Sheldon Clark said he accepted the Governor's request "in complete accord." The commission will act formally on the matter at a Thursday session.

Leaving no doubt the Governor's suggestion would be adopted, Clark said: "The 23-day suspension will give us time to put into effect methods of tightening up the boxing code."

Specific recommendations will be made by Clark on March 20 at the NBA meeting in Philadelphia. Clark said he will back a complete and detailed registration of boxers which will be immediately available upon request.

A Governor's spokesman said the proposed suspension would apply to both professional and amateur cards. Clark expressed surprise that the amateurs would be involved. The International Golden Gloves amateur show will not be affected since it will be held April 13 in Chicago, six days after the ban is lifted.

The move climaxes criticism of the conduct of the sport that followed the death of Sam Baroudi, 20-year-old Akron, Ohio, boxer who died after being knocked out in the Chicago Stadium ring February 20.

The ban would be lifted April 7, date of the Chicago Stadium benefit bout between Charles and Elmer Ray, Minneapolis, to raise $10,000 for Baroudi's parents.

The only boxing show of major importance affected by the ban is the scheduled 10-round bout between Ray Robinson, world's welterweight champion, and Georgie Abrams, Washington, at the International Amphitheater March 31.

Baltimore, March 16 (AP).—The Mason-Dixon Conference will consider expanding to a 16-member circuit at a meeting here April 4. The conference has membership applications from Roanoke and Lynchburg colleges in Virginia and the University of Baltimore.

Drach Quits Terrapins for Army Flying

Joe Drach, first-string Maryland tackle, turned in his football uniform yesterday. He plans to don another one shortly as an Air Force aviation cadet.

After this semester, Drach expects to report by July 1 to Randolph Field, San Antonio, Tex., for flight training.

"I've been thinking this over a long time," he said yesterday, explaining his decision, "and I've decided to enlist now while I can pass the physical. I've always loved to fly and it's my intention to make the Air Force my career."

Drach admitted that he will miss playing for the Terps next fall, but feels he doesn't want to risk an injury that might ruin his chance to fly.

The 6-foot-1, 208-pounder laughed when asked if the present war scare influenced his plans "Not at all," he said, "I've been wanting to go in for quite a while. I think it's a good program that can help me a lot. And I hope I can help the Air Force a lot, too."

Drach, 22, was an All-District tackle last season. He's from Philadelphia and was All-Catholic there when he played for Northeast Catholic High.

Late in the war, he was a Navy V-5 student and was finishing at North Carolina Preflight when he exercised his option to leave. "I'm sorry now that I did," he said yesterday. "I'd be much farther along."

"I know that I'll enjoy flying for the Air Force, though, and I'll be able to get a regular commission which is what I want."

3 Tie With 66s In Palmetto Golf

Aiken, S. C., March 16 (AP).—Ben Hogan, Henry Picard and George Fazio stroked five-under par 66s in a pouring rain today to share first honors and an estimated $10,000 in prize money in the fourth annual Palmetto golf tournament here.

Hogan, four times winner of the Vardon Trophy and Los Angeles 1948 Open champion, came down the tree-lined, dripping fairways in a breeze. Picard, the former PGA champion from Centerville, Ohio, and Fazio, Los Angeles pro., surprised the large gallery with their good showings.

House Committee Will Act Today on New Armory Bill

House District Committee action is planned today on a new bill for controlling non-military and sports uses of the District National Guard Armory.

Representative Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn.) introduced the bill in the House yesterday. It was drafted and approved by the House District Judiciary subcommittee of which O'Hara is chairman.

The bill calls for setting up a new three-member Armory Board. Members would be the Commanding General of the District Guard, the president of the District Board of Commissioners, and the Architect of the Capitol—positions now held by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, John Russell Young, and David Lynn.

In operating th earmory for sports and other non-military purposes, the board would be given authority to buy and sell necessary equipment, to install equipment and make structural changes which it finds "necessary or desirable," and to rent the place for non-military uses.

The board could operate or contract for operation of concessions, including food and non-alcoholic beverages, and checking services. It could turn the food and drink concession over to the National Guard canteen.

A $50,000 working capital fund would be set up. The income from renting th earmory would go first into that fund, and expenses would be paid from it. At the end of each fiscal year, all money in the fund above the $50,000 figure, would go into the general revenues of the District. Income from the armory which is now being held until Congress passes an armory bill, would go into the working fund.

The board could hire a manager and other personnel, without regard to Civil Service laws, and "without regard to any prohibition against double salaries contained in any other law."

4 Dead in 2 Days After Detention In Alcoholism

One Dies in Cell, Three at Gallinger; Alcoholic Cases Not on Increase

Four men either arrested by police on drunk charges or sent to hospitals for treatment of alcoholism were dead yesterday.

One man died Monday, the other three yesterday.

The dead were Jack Pearl, 47, of 422 3d st. nw.; Charles H. Higginbottom, 36, of 1838 Stanton ter. se.; Melvin G. Dorn, 49, of 1473 Irving st. nw., and Oscar L. Gullett, 44, of Richmond, Va.

Pearl and a companion, Archibald Cooper, 41, of 518 H st. nw., were arrested at 9 p. m. Monday at Pearl's rooming house when his landlady complained to police the men had been on a 10-day drinking spree.

Both Unable to Walk

Police said both men were unable to walk. They were taken to Gallinger Hospital in a patrol wagon and Pearl was pronounced dead at 8 a. m. yesterday. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said death resulted from congestive heart failure.

Higginbottom was arrested at 2:45 p. m. Monday in the 800 block of Potomac ave. se. and booked on a drunk charge at the Fifth Precinct. He became ill about 11:30 p. m. and was taken to Gallinger, where he died at 3 a. m. of congestive heart failure and epilepsy, an autopsy showed.

Dorn was arrested at 8 p. m. Monday at 14th and U sts. nw., and jailed at the Thirteenth Precinct on a drunk charge. Yesterday, at about 6:30 a. m. he was discovered unconscious in his cell. An Emergency Hospital ambulance was called and Dr. Donald Feda pronounced Dorn dead.

Dr. MacDonald said a number of sleeping tablets were found on Dorn. The coroner withheld certificates in the deaths of Dorn, Pearl and Higginbottom pending a chemical analysis of vital organs.

Gullett was found unconscious on the sidewalk in the 100 block of F st. nw., at 10:35 a. m. Sunday. Police took him to Gallinger, where he was admitted for treatment of alcoholism. He died there at 5:40 p. m. Monday. Dr. MacDonald, who said death resulted from a cerebral hemorrhage, issued a certificate of death due to natural causes.

Commenting on the deaths, Dr. Alvin Sweeney, superintendent of Gallinger, said the number of alcoholic cases was not increasing. He said 10 alcoholic cases were admitted to the hospital between Sunday and midnight Monday.

This, he said, was about the usual number for a 24-hour period during the week. On weekends and holidays, however, Dr. Sweeney added, the admissions for treatment of alcoholism in a 24-hour period usually run between 20 and 25.

Missing Man Found Dead in Basement

The body of Charles A. Hepburn, 59, missing from his home at 1501 Channing st. ne. since last Thursday, was discovered yesterday under a Brentwood Village apartment unit at 2428 14th st. ne.

The body was found about 10 a. m. by a workman in a basement which contains only heating pipes. It was sprawled across one of the pipes. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald estimated the man had been dead since about the time of his disappearance. He said death apparently was due to natural causes.

Hepburn, who was employed as a flagman by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, was married and the father of five children.

200 Md. Students Made Legislators In YMCA Program

Two hundred Maryland high school students have been selected as "boy legislators" for participation in the 1948 YMCA Youth and Government program, it was announced yesterday by Dr. Earle T. Hawkins, chairman of a State-wide committee for the program.

Principal features of the program will include a Pre-Legislative Assembly at the University of Maryland Saturday and a Model Legislature at Annapolis April 22-24, when youthful legislators will occupy seats in the State House and act on 75 "bills." P. G. Stromberg of Ellicott City has been appointed by Governor Lane to counsel the boys during the model legislative session.

More that 40 political, educational, business and religious leaders in Maryland are assisting the State-wide YMCA committee in preparations for the Youth and Government Program.

B. S. Bell Indicted

Art Dealer Accused of Tax Evasion

A Federal grand jury in Baltimore yesterday charged a Washington art dealer with evading more than $56,900 in income taxes over a three-year period, the Associated Press reported.

Named in a three-count indictment alleging false returns for 1943, 1944 and 1945 was Benjamin S. Bell, president of the Washington Art Galleries and Auction Rooms, 722 13th st. nw., who lives at 9707 Old Georgetown rd., Bethesda.

According to the indictment, Bell gave his net income for the three years as $43,689 while he actually made $136,154.

In 1943, the indictment charged, Bell earned $69,836 and owed $41,125 in income taxes. His return, however, listed a $11,135 income and he paid $2912.

In the second count, the Government charged Bell listed his 1944 earnings as $13,887 and paid $3378 although he actually made $41,115 and owed $18,771.

Bell, the indictment's third count read, made $24,203 in 1945 and owed $9840 in taxes, but he reported his earnings as $18,677 and paid $5593.

Shortly after the indictment was returned, Federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut issued a bench warrant for Bell and set bail at $1000. Officials indicated, however, no attempt would be made to issue the warrant immediately.

The defendant is married and has three children, prosecutors said. He listed five exemptions in his tax returns.

Bell could not be reached for comment last night.

High Bail Set For Four Men In Rape Case

Four alleged participants of an all-afternoon rape orgy in a moving truck were yesterday placed under high bail for action of the grand jury here.

Victim of multiple criminal assaults was a 26-year-old Washington housewife. She testified she was forced into a truck Saturday at 4th and I sts. nw., and raped twice by each of the four men.

Held in bond by Municipal Court Judge Ellen K. Raedy on rape charges were:

Aaron F. Rogers, 22, of 247 W. st. nw., $5000.

Sylvester Vaughn, 21, of 307 Lowrie pl. ne., $5000.

John H. Sistaire, 27, of 1627 Frederick pl. se., $2500.

Leon R. Newton, 20, of 520 Alexander pl. ne., $2500.

A fifth person, a 17-year-old youth arrested in connection with the case, was exonerated on investigation, and freed.

Rogers was also tried yesterday on a charge of carrying a deadly weapon, an empty .32-caliber revolver, and sentenced by Judge Raedy to $50 fine or 60 days in jail on that charge.

The story unfolded Saturday afternoon after Rogers returned the woman to her home and was attacked by her mother, father and sister. Police were called to quell the fight, and arrested him on the woman's complaint.

The victim's parents turned over to police the revolver they said they took from Rogers.

At yesterday's prolonged court arraignment, Curtis Mitchell, attorney for Rogers, argued that the weapon charge was illegal. Prosecutor J. Warren Wilson, Assistant District Attorney, contended the arrest climaxed "a continuing breach of the peace" and was therefore valid. Judge Raedy upheld the prosecution.

Almond Trying To Finish Business As Congressman

Richmond, Va. March 16 (AP).—In between the Marshall Plan and the housing shortage, Congressman J. Lindsay Almond, jr., of Roanoke, may remain a Congressman for a couple of weeks.

That was the word here today by telephone from Virginia's new attorney general, who has been trying to wind up his affairs in Washington for the past month. He still is uncertain when he will take his oath of office.

Judge Almond said he hoped to remain in the House of Representatives long epough to vote on the Marshall Plan and the income tax bill and then to find a house here.

5 GOP Delegates Named

Fredericksburg, Va., March 16 (Spl).—A delegation of five will represent Spotsylvania County at the first district Republican convention at Newport News Saturday. The members, elected at a party meeting at the county courthouse, are H. C. Thompson, J. C. Hawkins, M. L. Blaydes, John Hash and C. W. Harris.

German Paintings Placed on View at National Gallery Today; Wit, Whimsy of Sixteenth Century Canvas Hits Modern Note

A FORERUNNER OF MODERN CARTOONS—This section of Breughel's large canvas is called "The Inn of the Topsy-Turvy World." Initials are keyed to the story below, which describes the satirical work of art

Twenty square feet of with and whimsy, much of it as current now as when it was painted in the 16th Century, is displayed among the almost priceless German canvasses which go on view here today.

The colorful oil painting, "Dutch Proverbs" or "Flemish Folk Sayings," by Peter Breughel the Elder, is among the 202 paintings found by the U. S. Army in a German salt mine in 1945 and brought here for safekeeping.

From today to April 18, the pictures will have their only United States' showing at the National Gallery here and then will be returned to Germany. Principally from the Kaiser Frederich Museum in Berlin, and including works by Rembrandt, Rubens and Holbein, the paintings have been classed as legitimate German property.

Those who protest that fine are is dull will find some paintings, such as Brueghel's "Proverbs," as up-to-date in many respects as today's news.

A large canvas, typical of the period's attention to detail, it illustartes in humorous fashion our old folksayings and proverbs, and with sharp satire which appears as a forerunner of modern cartoons, gibes at hollow social and political conventions.

Charles M. Richards, registrar of the National Gallery of Art, and an authority on Brueghel, points out that in a photograph of Brueghel's painting, the setting is, "The Inn of the Topsy-Turvy World."

The up-ended globe, (A), sets the scene, while the shears in the window denote a clip-joint, or "sharp practices." Partially obscured hero is (B) the "middle of the roader," portrayed by a man who chooses to sit on the ground, between two stools. In a window above (C) the vice of gambling is illustrated by two angry players grabbing each others' noses, while a third man deftly pockets their money.

Scattered across the roof of the ill (D), are custards, or pies, which Richards explains concerns the "Utopia of the Slothful," discussed by many writers of the time, where roast pigs parade about waiting to be eaten, and soft-boiled eggs walk around with spoons in them. On the roof, an archer (E), futilely shoots arrows at the pies.

In the top right background (F), a farmer with his pants on fire, violates the proverb, "If you're driving swine, don't drive them through a field of corn," while a caged idiot (G) fiddles over the scene of wrong-doing.

At bottom, left (H), a shrew typifies the old saying, "She can tie the devil himself to a cushion." To the left of her (I) is the hypocrite, or back-biter (pillar-biter in Flemish); his hat on the post evolves from a saying that, "If his stature were as great as his opinion of himself he could hang his hat on it."

Near him (J) a woman denoting extreme caution carries live coals in tongs in one hand; a bucket of water in the other. The helmeted figure in foreground (K) hardly requires explanation—he's the obstinate man, in a rage, batting his head against a wall instead of walking around it. Above him, the quisecotic armor clad figure (L) portrays two proverbs, "The man who bells the cat may brave his claws." and "The man in armor thinks he's cat of the walk."

Proverbs concerning the sheep shearers in center (M) are "Clipping the ewe and letting the lamb go," and for the man trying to shear the pig, "A lot of noise and little wool." Behind them (N) is the old faithful, "women's gossip," with chickens listening in on the conversation, while out of the doorway comes a man (O), "Carrying his light in his own basket."

The young woman and old man (P) deal with several proverbs about the old marrying the young, plus, "If all the marriage-breakers wore a blue cloak, blue cloth would become very dear." In front of them is the Flemish equivalent of locking the stable after the horse is gone; a peasant (Q) fills in the hole after the calf has drowned.

Partially obsecured at right (R) is a favorite subject, with a man confessiong to a very bored-looking devil, "Don't confess to the devil, he knows all your sins."

In other sections of the painting, not shown are illustrations of "Casting roses (pearls) before swine"; "Don't cry over spilt milk"; "Blind leading the blind"; "You have to use fish to catch fish," and "He who wishes to go through the world must bend (adapt) himself."

(The paintings will be shown daily from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m., and on Sunday from 2 p. m. to 10 p. m.)

3000 Staff Boost Projected In Agriculture Dept. Budget

LOYALTY: Less than 1/100 of 1 per cent of the first million Federal workers checked by the FBI appear to be of doubtful loyalty. The tiny percentage is far smaller than anyone had anticipated and it makes poor forecasters of those who yelled witch-hunt when the President's loyalty program was launched. This is the record with the job about 60 per cent completed:

The FBI has processed and has returned to Civil Service the records of 1,005,944 Federal workers on whom it found no derogatory data. Full field investigations were opened by the FBI on 777 employes on whom derogatory information was found, but only 170 have been completed and this is the record of them:

The employe's loyalty was established conclusively in 33 cases; 38 employes resigned during the inquiries; 5 were found to be no longer employed, and 94 cases—or the tiny perpentage—are now being considered by Civil Service.

Incidentally, it was estimated that about 2 per cent of the Federal workers would have to be investigated when the program first got under way.

The FBI's duty under the programs ends when it reports the facts on employes to Civil Service, which in turn relays them to the employing agencies.

BUDGETS: The Senate gave the Budget Bureau a $200,000 slash in its budget. Between 50 and 75 employes would have to be laid off if it stands. . . . But it voted $18,000 to continue the library staff of the old Office of Government Reports. . . . Federal Communications was given $100,000 more by the Senate than was voted by the House. . . . And Federal Trade was given an increase of $170,000 in the Senate over the House budget. . . . The Civil Service budget was not touched by the Senate, despite an undercover attempt to smear this agency.

PAY PROGRESS: The Administration plan to overhaul the Classification Act was explained to the House Civil Service Committee yesterday by Civil Service Commissioner Arthur S. Flemming.

Flemming, however, made it clear that he had to support the President's policy of no cost-of-living pay raises at this time. But the official explained that the President did favor revamping of the act that fixes the salaries of about 800,000 Federal workers.

The suggested revision of the act would raise the average salary only $100. However, Flemming got over the point to the committee that his plan of revision could be used to raise salaries an average of $500, $700, or any amount, for that matter. It was obvious that Flemming hopes the committee will use his formula to raise salaries. By and large, the plan was well received by the House committee. A full committee meeting on pay problems will be held tomorrow.

Meantime, a scheduled meeting of the Senate Civil Service Committee was canceled when the printer failed to produce copies of the new Flanders-Baldwin bill. Despite contrary reports, no member of the Senate committee has raised objections to revision of the Classification Act.

Md. Group to Fight Wallace Candicacy

Baltimore, March 16 (AP).—A group of local labor leaders and an officer of the Americans for Democratic Action announced today they had formed the Maryland League of United Voters to fight the presidential candidacy of Henry A. Wallace.

Letters announcing the organization were signed by the regional presidents of the AFL and CIO, a local legislative representative of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and the president of the ADA.

Two Winchester Men Succumb to Burns

Winchester, Va., March 16 (Spl.).—Two Winchester men died here yesterday of burns suffered in separate fires in the city Sunday.

The victims were identified by police as Alfred Stephenson, whose clothing was ignited by an explosion as he was attempting to start a fire in his room, and Edward Dean, fatally burned in a fire which started from an overheated oil stove in his apartment. Both men lived alone, police said.

Day-Care Center Retention Urged By Rep. Miller

Schedules Hearing March 24 on Bill To Continue Units; Favors Changes

Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.) yesterday urged making Washington's child day-care centers a permanent District program, but with some changes.

Miller at the same time ordered public hearings before his House District Subcommittee March 24 on the bill of Representative Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.) to continue the centers indefinitely.

His present plan is to limit the hearings to officials of the District government and the Board of Public welfare, Miller said. "More than 100 parents have written urging that the centers be continued, and we know how they feel, both from the letters and from their testimony in other years," he explained.

Subcommittee Is Split

While personally favoring a permanent program of day-care centers, Miller emphasized that his subcommittee is divided on the question.

He said his study of day-care centers here and in six other large cities led to these conclusions:

1. Publicly suported day-care centers are recognized as a peacetime need in cities comparable to the District.

2. These centers render a usful service to the community in the protectoin and care of children whose mothers need to work.

3. The Welfare Department of a city is a suitable agency to administer the program.

4. Fees should be charged, scaled to size of family and income, but without a statutory maximum for family income. When the family income reaches $3600 a year, fees should be charged to meet all expenses.

Favors Self-Support

5. The District government should be authorized to continue this program indefinitely . . . in accordance with the needs of the community and subject to ordinary congressional budget control.

Miller emphasized his belief that if the centers are continued, they should be as nearly as possible self-suporting.

Meanwhile, Miller's subcommittee arranged for a final meeting March 24 on the bill to tighten District curbs on sex offenses, and to provide for treatment of sex psychopaths at St. Elizabeths Hospital. He predicted the bill would be approved, but said the subcommittee wants first to get a report on it from Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeths.

Note Asks $100

Threatened Family Gets Police Guard

A Southeast Washington family is under police protection since receiving a threatening note Sunday night, it was revealed yesterday.

The note, which asked $100 on a threat that "your family will be destroyed" was left under the door knocker of the Alex Jacobs apartment, 3425 A st. se., at 7:30 p. m. Sunday. Jacobs, 36, is an employe of the Navy Department's Bureau of Ships. His wife, Dora, is 33. They have a 6-year-old daughter and a 3-year-old son.

Capt. James E. Silvea, commanding officer of the Eleventh Precinct, said he attributes the note to a prankster, but one policeman has been detailed to the apartment and two will watch outside, he said.

The typed note, addressed "to whom it may concern" was signed in ink, "Mister X." It asked that the $100 in $10 bills be place behind a Greenway apartments sign at Minnesota ave. and E. Capitol st., and warned Jacobs not to "follow or call police." A postscript said "remember what the Ku Klux Klan did in Georgia. You will to live and your family will be destroyed," it said.

Lane Backs Down On Ouster After Clark's Apology

Annapolis, Md., March 16 (AP).—Governor Lane withdrew tonight his request for the resignation of John E. Clark, chairman of the Tidewater Fisheries Commission.

The Governor's action was made known in an exchange of letters with Clark. Clark was the chief figure in a controversy in the commission which had virtually halted official work of the body.

In a letter dated March 13, Clark asked that he be permitted to withdraw a previous communication in which he charged George T. Harrison, another commission member, and Capt. Amos S. Creighton, Tidewater fleet commander, were indulging in petty politics in conducting the department's work.

Clark said he had recently written in apology for "the implications" in his letter of February 6 to the Governor. He said he did not intend or realize these implications "until they were pointed out to me."

The Governor declared, "by your retraction and apology you have made it possible for me to withdraw my request for your resignation, and that I do herewith."

A warrant charging he murdered Hunter C. Lewis, 47-year-old ex-convict, was sworn out against Fierst last week after Lewis' body was found in a woods near Laurel. However, Wells said Baltimore would try Fierst on the charge of holding up Mechanical Contractors, Inc., and escaping with the payroll last year.

Area News in Brief

Inoculation Advised As Tick Time Nears

The ticks didn't get you last year, so why not take another chance? All you can lose is your life.

Those who don't want to take that chance for themselves or their children, however, were advised yesterday to bare their arms for insurance against Rocky Mountain spotted fever. The District Health Department has a season's vaccine supply available free to physicians.

Since some persons may be violently allergic to the egg base of the free tick serum, it is administered only by private physicians, explained Dr. James G. Cumming, director of the Health Department's bureau of preventable diseases.

Last year, seven cases of the fever were reported in the District. Of these seven, two died. The infectious bites in all seven cases were traced to wooded areas of nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Yesterday's warning was issued mainly for persons who venture into woods and fields of adjoining States. The vaccine immunizes at best, lessens infection's dangers for sure. For first immunization, three weekly injections are advised; then only one annual "shot" is sufficient.

Ticks, particularly the estimated one in 300 to 500 which passes on the ills of Rocky Mountain spotted fever, make their appearance in greatest numbers between April 15 and July 15. By August 15, the danger is considered passed.

Trailer Camp In Turmoil At Eviction

"We could get rid of Pockets, if we had to," the pert little trailer housefiwe sadly admitted, as she glanced up from her cooking.

Quickly, she added, with an impish smile: "But of course, we can't get rid of Danny."

Mrs. Mildred O'Rourke, 25, is talking. She and husband Jack, 25, electrician, face eviction. The O'Rourke family includes their fire image, Danny, 3 weeks old, and Pockets, 2-year-old Chihauhau.

They are one of 50 families living in their own trailers at Washington Tourist Camp in East Potomac Park who have been given rolling orders by Government Services, Inc., which manages the camp.

Camp Planned for Transients

The order, backed up by 30-day eviction notices, emanates from National Capital Parks. Purposes is to make way for the April tide of transientc, for whom, NCP says, the camp is designed.

After two years' residence in their home on stilled wheels, the O'Rourkes once again dread "the same old story"—can't find an apartment, especially with child and dog, homes are too expensive.

"Once we had a room," Mrs. O'Rourke recalls. "It was dirty, we shared the bath with a small army and paid $50 a month."

Other trailer camps, she says, "are either unfit for human habitation or have sickening waiting lists."

Washington Tourist Camp, she said, is well-run, only 65 cents a day, and features Park police protection.

Flower Garden Plans Killed

Genuinely delighted with her present home and location, Mrs. O'Rourke noted that she had just bought seeds. She had planned to fringe her small "estate" with petunias and marigolds.

Her trailer is scaled proportionately, down to the miniscule gold fish bowl. Birch-pannelled, the $2500 cottage on wheels has running water, electricity, gas heater—a miniature apartment replete with all the homey touches, rugs to record player.

Uncertainty is also the lot of Harold Chase, 47, Navy teletype repairer, and his sister, secretary to Senator W. D. Jamieson (D., Iowa). Maybe they'll have to throw up jobs here and return to Fulton, N. Y.

"At home," said Harold, "they have trailer camps where they don't boot people out."

The eviction will knife the married life of the Edward Carmichaels. Edward, 30, Public Buildings Administration guard, will find a room; Virgie, 29, and Mary Anne, 5, will return to Huntington, W. Va.

Joseph Koch, 44, carpenter, and his wife, Myrna, 44, Pentagon cashier, recently sunk $3500 in a streamlined trailer as a permanent home.

Interne Talks Put Off

At least 13 Arlington Parent-Teachers Associations have indorsed the County School Board's request for a $2,444,000 budget for 1949, B. Alden Lillywhite, chairman of the Citizens Committee for School Improvement, said yesterday.

The budget would require a boost in the school tax rate from $1.25 to $1.75 per $100 of assessed valuation. Lillywhite described the school budget as "embodying every principle of absolute economy and necessity."

Clothing Plea 'Aired'

An appeal for clothing for two 14-year-old girls who barely escaped with their lives when the Empire Building collapsed December 16 was heard yesterday over WOL-Mutual's "Heart Desire" program

The appeal was made by Linda Sykes, 221 Third st. nw., 14-year-old Jefferson Junior High School student, who wrote a letter to the program asking help for her two school chums. In the letter, Linda pointed out that the girls are badly in need of clothing, and must miss school and might not pass if they are out of school too frequently.

"Heart's Desire" is sending Linda four dresses, size 12, and two coats for her girl friends, Betty Burrell and Lola Ambrosia.

To Follow D. C. on DST

The Montgomery County commissioners yesterday jumped the gun on the controversial question of daylight saving time for this summer. At their regular meeting the board voted unanimously to "go along" with whatever the District adopts this year.

Last year in the county there was bitter opposition to DST and it was adopted only after a last ditch fight by commissioners elected from rural areas.

Auto Dealer Sues Buyer He Charges Broke Resale Ban

Baltimore, March 16 (AP).—A car dealer today filed suit in Baltimore City Court against a recent customer on a contention the buyer resold the purchased car in violation of the sales agreement.

On February 6, the complaint said, Selko sold the car for $2300.

Your Baby and Mine

Stammering May Come From Nerves

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The stuttering which children tend to develop at about 3 years of age is usually a passing phenomenon. The mother expresses it this way, "Suddenly, he began to stammer." It is only that it seems sudden, for this behavior is related to other tensions which develop at about this time. The mother may notice, too, that the child's speech becomes high and very loud.

Sometimes the stammering is connected with some event in the child's life which has upset him. The coming of a new baby is an experience which all children do not take in stride. They have to adjust to it and while they make the adjustment they are temporarily nervous and stammering might be an indication of this.

To move into a new neighborhood, or to a strange town, is not as pleasantly exciting to a child as it may be to the parents. Any move is a change and some children react poorly to change and show their tension by uneven speech.

Also, at this age, the child is acquiring new words and putting them into sentences. Heretofore, he could talk with one or two words and punctuate them with helpful gestures and cries. Now he is struggling to put his thoughts into words and bring about in sentences a fulfillment of his desires. Parents encourage this by saying, "Now, you tell me what you want and I'll get it for you." The effort to do this is often too much for the eager, nervous child.

Stuttering of this type should be short-lived. Within six months the child will have advanced into another and calmer stage of growth. He will have acquired a firmer grasp on his new vocabulary and will be in a position to let the words flow out smoothly.

The stammering child does not need special exercise in speaking, nor help in ending his sentences. To make him self-conscious of his speech is to increase his strain and make it more difficut for him to speak.

Perhaps he needs most of all to feel a sense of ease and calm in his home, to be given more loving attention if it is necessary to help him over the hump of a new baby, or a new home or environment, and then wait for time itself to give him a better command of his vocabulary.

Sen. Hawkes Sees Tax Misuse In Sending Funds Overseas

Senator Albert W. Hawkes (R., N. J.) last night sharply criticized Congress and the Administration's overseas financial help programs.

Speaking at a dinner meeting of the D. C. League of Republican Women's Evening Political Study Group, he accused Congress and the Administration of voting billions of dollars into the hands of rulers of peoples abroad in order that those rulers might further exploit their people. "The only hope of the world," he said, "is to reestablish initiative by giving the peoples of foreign nations the right to work and the right to profit from work so that they may retain some reward for their accomplishment."

The Senator praised the tax bill reported on yesterday by the Senate Finance Committee. He said that the tax bill resulted from weeks of deliberation and the taking of testimony in an effort to present a tax program which would reduce taxes fairly for all Americans. "Our people should not be required to continue to shoulder the load of wartime taxes as they endeavor to follow their peacetime pursuits," he asserted. "It is my opinion that the Constitution of the United States does not give the people's representatives in Congress the power to tax for the purpose of making gifts or bad loans to foreign nations, and that the Sixteenth Amendment was never intended to place an income tax upon the people for revenues to be used to rebuild the world outside our borders."

"The misuse of the power to tax in order to redistribute property and to make gifts and ill advised loans abroad can easily lead to the socialization of this country," declared the New Jersey Senator. He added that our living standards may be reduced to those of other nations which have followed a similar course.

HAIL and farewells were said at Rear Admiral and Mrs. P. W. B. Brooking's tea yesterday. Left to right are Admiral Brooking, who is retiring as Chief of Staff to the British Naval Staff; Mrs. Martin Vogel, who loaned her house for the party; Mrs. Brian Schofield, Admiral Schofield, who is Admiral Brooking's successor, and Mrs. Brooking. Brookings Give Farewell Party

By Marie McNair

REAR ADMIRAL and Mrs. Pat W. B. Brooking said goodby to their Washington friends yesterday at a cocktail party they gave at the home of Mrs. Martin Vogel on 30th st. And Lilie Vogel, with orchids on the shoulder of her trim black suit and wearing a feathered black hat, was pleased as punch to be just a guest. "Why, I think I'll do this all the time," she told her friends.

The Brookings, who will sail Friday aboard the Queen Mary for home, were introducing Rear Admiral Brian Schofield, who'll take over Admiral Brooking's job as chief of staff to the British Naval Staff, and Mrs. Schofield. Tiny Mrs. Schofield wore a ballerine length black frock and round, upturned hat.

Hostess Wears Taffeta

Mrs. Brooking, who is very tall, very blond, wore a slim black skirt and a green checked taffeta peplum blouse studded with green stones.

While this was largely a service party, some of the Brookings' particular friends had also come to bid them farewell.

Earlycomers, skipping between the raindrops, gathered before the crackling fire. Engineer Commissioner Gen. Gordon Young and Mrs. Young were there, and John Nicholas Brown, Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air. Mrs. Young, just back from New York, must have searched the shops for her becoming black hat with high standing brim of dotted veiling which wound into a scarf-like effect around her throat.

Admiral Sir Henry Moore came a bit later and by early evening the drawing rooms were filled. There were the British Naval Attache and Mrs. P. W. Wootten, the Air Attache of the New Zealand Legation, Air Commodore J. L. Findlay, and Mrs. Findlay; the Naval Attache of the Ausralian Legation and Mrs. S. H. K. Spurgeon, and Comdr. F. J. D. Pemberton of the Canadian Embassy, with Mrs. Pemberton.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. John Chapman—he's head of the Australian Military Mission—were in the center of a congenial group, and the USA was represented by Vice Admiral and Mrs. Robert Carney, Vice Admiral and Mrs. Arthur Radford, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Alfred M. Pride, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Earl E. Stone, Rear Admiral and Mrs. K. J. Clark, Vice Admiral and Mrs. George Hussey, among many others.

Then there were Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Albert Gruenther, Gen. and Mrs. Hoyt Vandenberg, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Coolidge, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Crawford, Mr. and Mrs. Prentiss Coonley, Mrs. Frederick Witt, topping her black costume with a white hat; Capt. and Mrs. Harold Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hurd, who left for a dinner party; Capt. Pierre Lancelot, Military Attache of the French Embassy; Capt. F. Stam of the Netherlands Embassy, and the Dutch Minister and Mme. Reuchlin.

Your Questions on Homemaking

Can you tell me if there is any way to remove silver nitrate stains from a porcelain sink? C. S.

Stains made by silver nitrate can be removed by touching them with iodine, which will change the color, then wiping with water, then applying ammonia or photographic hypo.

Is there any furniture polish which will keep limed oak furniture in condition? My table tops get marked very easily. For instance, I can never even have warm plates put down without a mark showing. Glasses also mark the tables. S. F.

A good quality of paste wax will give the surface considerable protection against water and some other stains. It sounds as though the furniture may be finished with shellac, which is more easily marked by heat and water than varnish. As far as the heat marks go, using heatproof mats under your linen ones and a thick silence pad under tablecloths will help. As you probably know, many heat marks can be quickly removed by rubbing with a cloth dipped in camphorated oil or oil of peppermint.

Can you tell me if there is any place in Washington where I could rent card tables and matching chairs for a bridge party? M. E. B.

Several local caterers rent bridge tables and chairs. Look under "Caterers" in the yellow section of your telephone book for a firm that advertises a rental service on party accessories.

I have a set of soap figures 3 inches high of the Holy Family with angels, shepherds, and the Wise Men, which my son, who was killed in Italy, had made before the war. They are very fragile and becoming brittle. I would like very much to preserve them. Could these be set in clear plastic cubes or something similiar without melting, in preference to painting with a preparation? E. C. J.

To place these figurines in plastic cubes, a warm plastic material (about 150 degrees F., I understand) would have to be poured around them with possible damage to the delicate soap sculpture. Or else molds of the figures would have to be made, then duplicates of some hard material which could be used in making the plastic cubes. After the plastic was poured, the duplicates would have to be removed and the figurines inserted in the hardened plastic cubes. This would all be rather complicated.

There is a liquid plastic which you could apply to the surface which would be air tight and protective. For further information about this coating, call Dupont 8363. Or you could have a display case made for the figures. I am told that such a case could be made of wood and plexiglass and would keep the figurines visible and protected. To discuss the problem further with a firm which makes such display cases, call Executive 1080.

Will you give the directions and proportions of materials used in making the plant that grows from coal? F. W.

Directions for making a "chemical flower garden" are given in H. Bennett's "Chemical Formulary" as follows:

6 tablespoons salt
6 tablespoons bluing
6 tablespoons water
1 tablespoon ammonia water

After thorough mixing, pour over a clinker, a piece of coke or brick. After piece has been wet well with liquid, drop on it a few drops of mercurochrome solution or red ink or green ink. (DO NOT use any other solutions in the mixture, as you might get an adverse chemical reaction).

After materials have been brought together, a coral-like colored growth soon begins to appear on the clinker. This increases rapidly. It also tends to form on the edges of the dish and will climb up and over them unless they have been rubbed with vaseline. Addition of a little more ammonia water to dish will produce more growth after first has stopped. Or the whole may be allowed to dry, then kept without further changes.

Is it "rarebit" or "rabbit?" The argument still rages, but everyone agrees that it's welcome on almost any menu anytime, especially during Lent. This tasty cheese rarebit (rabbit) was made by combining 2 cups of shredded cheese and ½ cup milk in a double boiler and heating them until the cheese melted. Meanwhile, an egg, ⅛ teaspoon paprika, ¼ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, and ¼ teaspoon dry mustard were beaten together. The egg mixture was added to the cheese, which was constantly stirred until thick. Two tablespoons of fortified margarine were added just before serving. (This made enough to serve four persons.) Parsley and spiced apples were used as a garnish

The Delayed Dinner

If dinner must be delayed and you are afraid the roast will be too well done, turn the oven as low as possible and open the oven door so that it remains in place but the catch is loose and thus lets in a little outside air. The roast will merely remain hot but will not over-cook.

Modulated Voices

One cannot start too young to teach children the value of quiet, modulated voices. It is during their youth they develop unpleasant qualities in their voice and if corrected constantly these habits can soon be overcome. A beautiful speaking voice is a valuable asset when one arrives at maturity.

Michael and Queen to Call On Truman; British Race Is Excuse for Party Here

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

KING MICHAEL OF ROMANIA and the Queen Mother Helen will arrive in Washington next Sunday for a brief visit. They will be received by President Truman on Monday. The following day, Secretary of Commerce Averell Harriman will honor them at luncheon and in the evening they will dine with the British Ambassador and Lady Inverchapel. Lord Inverchapel is a personal friend of Queen Helen and has known her for many years. Both Lord Inverchapel and Averell Harriman, as part of a tripartite commission, visited Romania early in 1946. Neither the King nor the Queen will accept any social invitations as they are making this visit solely to get to know the United States, to see its factories, hospitals, learn about how we handle social welfare problems.

Convention Is Mapped

MRS. NORMAN WHITEHOUSE, who is national chairman of the Women's Action Committee, is in Washington making plans for the committee's convention which is scheduled to take place from April 7 through April 9. Of two outstanding functions of the get-together one will be a banquet at the Shoreham on April 8. Mrs. Robert Low Bacon is the chairman and the speakers will be former Senator Warren Austin, who heads our U. N. delegation, and Anne O'Hare McCormick, star foreign news columnist for the New York Times. The follow-up luncheon will feature George Allen, our former Ambassador to Iran, who returned recently to take over Bill Benton's propaganda job in the State Department, and svelte Authoress Fannie Hurst, whose sartorial decor almost always includes a single calla lily.

Blood Donors Needed

PERHAPS SOME of Mrs. Henry Stebbins' many friends are still unaware that she has been seriously ill many weeks, that her life was saved by many blood transfusions. Pretty, gay Jackie, whose husband is an assistant to Ambassador Lewis Douglas, will need more transfusions before she is well again.

The "blood" situation is this: A patient can get as many transfusions as necessary from the hospital blood bank for a certain charge, then if the blood transfusion is replaced the charge is cancelled.

It is not necessary for a donor to have the same type blood as the patient—for it all goes into a pool. However, blood does not "keep" very long and replacements for a transfusion should be made within three days. Donors from the British Embassy (Jackie is English) are donating four pints—and if any of her friends can spare blood, just call the Central Laboratory at the Doctors Hospital.

Dinner to Observe Races

THE ANNUAL Oxford-Cambridge Boat Race dinner's taking place March 19 at the Mayflower. The dinner is set for nine days before the race, has nothing to do with rowing, and is merely a legitimate excuse for a pleasant gathering. Four hundred Oxford-Cambridge graduates, representing 15 nationalities, live in the Washington area. Last year some 119 turned up.

Though certain honorary degree holders such as Generals Marshall and Eisenhower and Admiral Stark have been invited, only three are allowed to speak. This year Sir Jock Balfour is toastmaster; the three speakers will be Joseph Harsch of CBS, Netherlands Minister Jonkheer Otto Reuchlin and Stanley Hornbeck, recently our envoy to Holland.

Last year speakers were supposedly limited to a snappy five minutes, but a smart guest clocked the oratory flow at 40 minutes each for the two toastmasters, 20 minutes apiece for the four speakers! On the committee are the State Department's Hamilton Robinson, former Assistant Attorney General Norman Littell and J. Burke Wilkinson.

FORSYTHIA and magnolia made a garden of the Chinese Embassy yesterday for the tea given by Mme. Koo. Members of the committee sponsoring the fashion show to be given March 31 for the benefit of the Institute of Chinese Culture Student Fund were honor guests.

The hostess stood at the doorway leading into the library to receive. She was costumed in black and gold tunic and dark jade jewelry. Tea and coffee were served in the dining room. Angel food cake with fluffy white icing was served and delicious small sandwiches and salted almonds.

Senora de Espinosa de los Monteros, wife of the Mexican Ambassador, came in a Paris hat trimmed with long aigrette feathers, and Mrs. Robert E. Freer in flowered chapeau. Miss Margaret Thors, one of the models for the coming fashion show, was there with Miss Betty Jeanne Harrell and Miss Maimie Li.

Reception Honors Siamese Envoy

Prince Wan Waithayakon, Ambassador of Siam, was honored at a stag reception at Blair House yesterday afternoon between 6 and 8 o'clock. Host at the function was Norman Armour, Assistant Secretary of State.

The occasion marked the resumption of diplomatic relations between Siam and the United States. Last November there was a coup d'etat in Siam, and the subsequent government went unrecognized by the United States. Recent elections resulted in the present government in Siam, which is recognized, as of March 6.

The Ambassador presented his credentials to President Truman long before the coup d'etat, and it was not necessary for him to present them again.

Guests at the reception yesterday included top diplomats from the different embassies, and from the State Department came Kenneth Landon, chief of the Siamese desk; Norman T. Ness and W. Walton Butterworth.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Since Moving to Southern California, Woman Finds Unending Trickle of Inland Relatives Arriving to Enjoy the Climate as Her Guests

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Ever since we moved to California I have been bothered by a situation that also baffles many of my neighbors who face the same difficulty.

We have a lovely home here and the climate is delightful; but the problem is my hordes of cousins, nieces and nephews, all of whom seem to think I love to have them visit us at any time, and for as long as they care to stay.

Our two children are in college, so their rooms are vacant most of the year, and the setup seems irresistible to my kin from small towns far away. My husband has few relatives and although he is kind and very tolerant of mine, it doesn't seem fair that it's always mine who are pulling the latchstring.

For instance, a niece arrived at dawn some time ago, with her husband and two children, expecting me to take them in until they could find employment and a place to live. This meant scrapping all my plans, to be their cook, tourist-guide and meal ticket for weeks; and in the end I get a brief thank-you note,—their full duty from their viewpoint.

She Explodes at Spinster Cousin

HOWEVER, the latest incident concerns a cousin, 42, unmarried, whom I hadn't seen for 30 years, who came to visit us of her own initiative, shortly after her mother died, leaving her a substantial legacy.

During the week she was here I drove her all over the county and into Mexico, paying all bills en route. Then we went to Los Angeles, where we halved the hotel bill. As we were taking a sightseeing bus—the sights are old stuff to me,—she waited for me to buy my own ticket. At that, I told her I thought it was time she treated me, whereupon she bought the tickets, paid for our dinner and left that evening!

Now I am wondering if I should have held my tongue and paid for my own dinner, as I probably never shall see her again. In retrospect my grievance seems rather unimportant; but some of these inland relatives think nothing of staying three weeks with me. Did I do right or wrong? And what is the correct defense, if any?

C. N.

Defense Begins Within the Soul

DEAR C. N.: In all probability you invited the problem by advertising your set-up via family grapevine, writing various relatives to the effect, "We miss you, of course, but it's wonderful here . . . you must come and see,"—thus giving the spongers, adventurers and restless element at the other end excuse and incentive to hit the trail.

As for how to curb the trend, it seems to me you've already fired the opening gun in blowing your top at the spinster cousin. She may or may not "tell all" to the folks inland; and indeed she has face-saving reason for keeping mum. But in any event, she won't take back any glowing accounts of your hospitality. Rather I think it is safe to say she will be pretty caustic about the time she had at your expense.

The correct defense against exploitation begins in the soul, after one's long suffering has been exhausted, as in your case,—at which point the mature personality realizes the constructive necessity of enforcing a policy of enlightened self interest.

Only the Weak Are Put-Upon

IT ISN'T generous nor is it admirable to let one's energies, privacy, time and earnings be rifled by parasites. Every individual has the inalienable right to defend himself against that sort of thing. And it is to be hoped that he has the wisdom and firmness of character to do so, with tranquil poise and no apologies.

In general, persons who put themselves out, against their preference and beyond the limits of their nervous tolerance, to oblige others' selfish demands on them, are unduly dependent on audience-support to prop up their self regard. Given the natural dignity of intrinsic self respect, adults don't give more of themselves than they choose, and quite significantly, it isn't expected of them!

It was childish of you to sharply demand that the cousin "treat" you for a change; but no more childish than (1) your previous performance in letting yourself be used as a convenience by relatives for years and (2) her miffed reaction of taking flight.

You were tired, cross, near the breaking point from nervous fatigue, and it was a blessing she left that night. What if you never see her again? She has nothing to contribute to your inner, your real security; and in retrospect you may hail the incident as a turning point towards maturity in your experience.

M. H.

WHEN there's an anniversary, there's sure to be a birthday cake. So it was yesterday when Washington Chapter of Hadassah celebrated its twenty-ninth anniversary with a party at the Jewish Community Center. Mrs. Joseph Freedman (left) president of the Washington Chapter, cuts the cake while Mrs. Mark Smith, chairman of the Jewish National Fund Committee of Hadassah, looks on. While much of the time was given over to programs and fun, members took advantage of the large luncheon attendance to map out plans for the organization's forthcoming donor dinner

One on the Aisle—

Roosevelt Story Wins Over Snubs

By Richard L. Coe

WITHOUT HONOR: Like the proverbial prophet in his own country, "The Roosevelt Story" has had a tough time getting a showing in this one-time FDR stronghold . . . You would think that a newsreel biography of the late President would find Washington grabbing at the picture, but such is not the case . . . As Cordell Hull said after seeing a private screening of the picture Monday afternoon, "It's dynamite." . . . It's dynamite because it's an election year and certain figures high in the Government, once strong in Roosevelt circles, are doing their darndest to avoid having anything to do with the film . . . Even though its opening is a benefit for the D. C. Society for Crippled Children, an organization particularly dear to the Roosevelt heart . . . When the picture officially opens the new Dupont Theater tomorrow night certain old Roosevelt figures will be conspicuous by their absence . . . The picture was ready for Washington last September, but it couldn't find a home . . . The feeling was that the Republicans would be offended by this reminder of the past and the polls suggested it wouldn't be long before Republicans would be people you asked in to dinner . . . To avoid politics, a non-political club, one of the most famous in the Nation, was asked to sponsor the film in its quarters . . . After some deliberation, the president of the club decided, as he put it, "to let Roosevelt rest in his grave." . . . How the rank and file welcome this picture, which was made primarily to be shown in foreign lands, will be revealing.

ANOTHER POLITICAL football arrives this morning at Keith's, "The Senator Was Indiscreet" . . . This is the comedy worked out by Writer Charles MacArthur, Producer Nunnally Johnson and Director George S. Kaufman . . . William Powell plays the gentleman of the title, a chap who keeps a diary . . . It, too, has been a long while reaching Washington; for some months it didn't reach anywhere, as a matter of fact . . . They kept the can locked up in a safe while the Un-American Activities Committee was at its height . . . It was Kaufman, you recall, who collaborated with Moss Hart on those prime political satires of more tolerant years, "Of Thee I Sing," "Let 'Em Eat Cake" and "I'd Rather Be Right" . . . With the House presumably driving hard toward ERP, do you suppose one is a bit innocent to think the Hill won't have time to kick up a storm about this one?

OPEN-AIR RACE: The news of one opening came first, but it looks as if the winner of the drive-in sweepstakes is the Airport . . . Paul Foley's drive-in near the National Airport will start things off Friday night . . . "The five-day weather forecast," says Foley, "is good and we're in for a fine weekend. Remember I told you four months ago I'd call you March 15? I'm a day late, but I've got the answer . . . What the picture will be I'm not yet certain, but we'll have a good one Friday night."

E. M. LOEW'S Drive-In on the Richmond Highway, 3 miles below Alexandria, is set to open Easter Sunday, the 28th . . . Manager Don King, fresh out of Florida, reports he's got a fresh lineup of pictures from M-G-M, Paramount and RKO and that he's spending $20,000 on improving runways, sound and projection equipment . . . It looks as if spring is icumin', loud sing cuckoo . . . When for Beltsville, Mr. Lust?

BOOKINGS: The Barter Theater will be bringing John Patrick's play, "The Hasty Heart," to Alexandria next Monday night; George Washington High School is the place, 8 o'clock the hour and the Alexandria Junior Chamber of Commerce the sponsor . . . You've noticed, surely, that "The Song of Bernadette" has faded at the Columbia to give place to an eerie double bill, "Bride of Frankenstein" and "Son of Frankenstein;" the Karloff is the one of yore, not the friendly, baffled professor of "The Linden Tree." . . . "The Barber of Seville" stays a second week at the Little, with the Met's Tagliavini as the star . . . The Hippodrome will be holding "That Hamilton Woman" for a third week beginning Saturday.

CANCELLATIONS: Trust you saw yesterday morning's rapid fire ad of Woodward and Lothrop's to the effect that illness had kept the James Masons from showing up for their autograph matinee . . . "Stars over Ruby" has been canceled by the Arlington Little Theater, which evidently likes to keep its cancellations to itself.

"NIGHT MUST FALL," the Emlyn Williams warhorse, opened a five-night run last night at the University of Maryland Theater . . . Among the players are Kennard Calsee of Riverdale, as Danny; Kit Herman, as his wheel-chair victim, and Helen Hereford as the heroine . . . Eugene O'Sullivan directed and Orville Larson did the sets.

All-American Sets Passenger Flights

Baltimore, March 16 (AP).—All-American Aviation, Inc., said today its proposed passenger service in eight Eastern States, including Maryland and New Jersey, will be ready to start within six months.

The airline now operates air-pickup mail service in Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, West Virginia, Delaware and Connecticut.

The Civil Aeronautics Board recently gave the airline tentative permission to organize freight and passenger feeder service, with the provision such service would not duplicate its present air-pickup service. The CAB is to rule on whether the routes All-American proposes will be parallel.

Va. Alcoholic Program Can Treat 600 Yearly

Richmond, Va., March 16 (AP).—Virginia's new program for the treatment of alcoholics will enable the State to handle approximately 600 patients per year, Dr. L. J. Roper, State health commissioner, said today.

Tentative arrangements have been made with the Medical College of Virginia for 16 beds to be set aside for the program, Roper said. Preliminary work toward setting up the treatment plan will be started in the next few weeks.

$13,450 Approved For Insect Control

Frederick, Md., March 16 (Spl.)—A budget calling for the expenditure of $13,450 to combat the Japanese beetle and European corn borer in Frederick County was adopted last night by the County Insect Control Committee.

A roadside spray service will be maintained by the committee and beetle traps will be leased to those applying for them.

Spokesmen said damage to the county corn crop last year from the beetle alone approximated $125,000. The European corn borer is considered an even worse menace by local canners.

Court Will Be Asked Today To Order Falls Church Census

Fairfax Circuit Court Judge Paul E. Brown will be asked today to order a Falls Church census which may result in lifting the town to a second class city.

A petition for the move, unanimously adopted by the Town Council in its March 8 meeting, will be sent for Judge Brown's action this morning.

A population of 5000 or more is required before a Virginia town may become a city of the second class. But by its last census, a special count taken in 1945, Falls Church population stood at 4341.

Most Falls Church officials estimate the town's population at well over the required 5000, and a recent telephone company estimate set it at 5800.

Town Attorney LaRue Van Meter said yesterday that the population tally, if approved by Judge Brown, will be an "enumeration" of town inhabitants.

An earlier proposal to tie a full census of population groups, housing, and school population to the enumeration will not be considered, Van Meter said.

Under the Virginia Code, the attorney pointed out, the town would be divided into four parts with two "enumerators" in each.

Four of the enumerators would be town residents, four of them residents of Fairfax County, Van Meter explained. The survey would cover all "inhabitants," rather than just those who have established residence in Falls Church.

Md. Tax Delinquents Hasteen to Pay Up

Annapolis, Md., March 16 (AP).—Tax delinquents are paying up on their State income levy in increasing numbers.

Comptroller James J. Lacy reported today that during February 1192 delinquents filed returns and paid a total of $13,280 to the State treasury. The returns resulted from the sending of 2741 registered letters after evidence of delinquency was uncovered by the income tax division workers.

Smithsburg Elects Newman Burgess

Smithsburg, Md., March 16 (AP).—Roy D. Newman was elected burgess of this Washington County town yesterday. In the first contested mayoral election Smithburg has had in 14 years, he received 180 votes, to 102 for Charles R. Ferguson and 29 for Earl Bowman.

Charles I. Wolfinger is retiring after heading the town government since 1934. Ralph J. Murray, J. Clark Fraver and Jacob Delauter were elected town commissioners.

Va. Phone Rate Hearing Near End

Richmond, Va., March 16 (AP).—The State Corporation Commission tomorrow will begin the final phase of a hearing on application of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of Virginia for approval of proposed rate increases amounting to $1,400,000 additional annual revenue for the company.

The commission has announced that Dr. Ralph E. Badger of Detroit, an expert in investment management, will appear as a witness tomorrow. It expects to take from 10 days to two weeks to wind up the hearings.

Tuck to Air Views on Va. Legislation

Richmond, Va., March 16 (AP).—Governor Tuck disclosed today he is going to hold a public post-mortem Thursday night over the radio on the accomplishments of the recently departed General Assembly.

Beyond the bare announcement that he would "review his legislative program" in a half hour address between 8:30 and 9 . m., the Governor did not care to make known the precise points he would stress.

It was regarded certain however, that his newly-enacted election legislation—the widely discussed anti-Truman bill—would be an important part of the talk.

The administration contended during the legislature debate that the Virginia voters had not received a clear impression of the precise scope of the legislation.

Wider Latitude Seen

It stuck by its assertion that the bill—rather than being restrictive of voters rights—would in reality give them a wider latitude in their choice of candidates for the Presidency and vice-presidency.

The address will be carried through stations WRNL and WRVA in Richmond with a number of other Virginia stations joining in the hookup. A number of other stations plan to rebroadcast recordings of the talk.

(In nearby Virginia, radio stations have not yet made plans on carrying the program.)

In Richmond last night Ellis Arnall, former governor of Georgia, said the recently ordered investigation of Richmond Newspapers, Inc., "smacks of the techniques of dictators.

Free Press Defended

Arnall commented on the recent resolution of the Virginia house of Delegates, saying, "that bill smacks of the techniques of dictators, in totalitarian nations, who fear a free and unbridled press.

"A free press is the greatest bulwark of an enlightened people. I have found that any public official or group of public officials who fear the press are usually suffering from guilty consciences."

Meanwhile, the state corporation commission asked the clerkof the House for a copy of the resolution directing the legislative probe.

Postlude

Composers' Club Gives Concert

From Yesterday's Late Editions

By Paul Hume

Friends, neighbors and casual observers gathered 'round last night to hear a concert of music by the Washington Composers' Club.

The Phillips Gallery provided the background and two pianos for an affair which went with all the style of a Hokinson drawing. Singers, duo-pianists, a clarinet and accompaniments came and went before an audience which clapped as loud for one thing as another.

Musically there was a good deal of imitation, some intentional, some subconscious. Eric Bovet has written man finer songs than the three episodic operas which Ann Hoehler sang. Dorothy Radde Emery, on the other hand, contributed four which stand with most of her works as pleasant, showing a good vocal line. These were sung by Margaret Barnwell.

La Salle Spier and Chester Page played two pianos in Spier's recent suite inspired by the carillon at Luray. Those who admire the art of the carilloneur must have found it difficult to endure the obvious mimicking of the pianos, while those who can live in peace without the great bells were taxed beyond human endurance. Still they endured, some of them even clapping.

It was all too much for us and we left, although we respect and admire Emerson Meyers in everything of his we have heard, and regretted not being able to remain for his clarinet sonata, in which he collaborated with Chief Musician James S. Lewis of the Navy Band.

Three choral numbers of Deane Shure were to close the evening. With two dismal programs of Washington composers behind us, we look forward to Thursday night when Washington's foremost composer, Mary Howe, will be represented in a concert of varied works at the Arts Club. Such programs in the past have been highly rewarding and musically satisfying experiences.

Lacy Assails Judge for Lenient Sales Tax Decision

Towson, Md., March 16 (AP).—State Comptroller James J. Lacy termed "disgraceful" a judge's decision not to fine or send to jail a man who pleaded guilty to charges of violating the Maryland Sales Tax Act.

Lacy issued his statement yesterday after Judge John B. Gontrum released Philip Ellis, a Baltimore County night club proprietor, on his promise to pay $700 in sales levy collections to the State, plus a $350 penalty for tardiness.

Judge Gontrum, sitting in the Baltimore County Circuit Court, said he did not believe Ellis "meant to wilfully evade the sales tax law."

The State comptroller, on learning of the verdict, said that "if the people are going to ignore the laws, there is no sense of passing them unless we get some enforcement from the bench."

Test Borings for Bay Crossing Delayed 2 Months by Winds

Sandy Point, Md., March 16 (AP).—Maryland's proposed highway link between the Eastern and Western shores—not yet in the blueprint stage—ran into new squalls today.

High winds over Chesapeake Bay have been blowing piledriver scows out of position, the contractor said. He estimated that test borings may not be completed until May, two months behind schedule.

And one opponent blew cold on the whole plan for a 30-million-dollar toll bridge or tunnel across the bay. Former Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin said in Baltimore that a trans-bay road would "change that shore tradition of more than 300 years of graceful living."

Real estate agents already are busy cutting tidewater property into small lots and threaten to rob the shore of its "atmosphere," he said.

McKeldin suggested that the State add a fourth ferryboat to its service between Sandy Point and Matapeake, instead.

Talked of for 40 years, the crossing is now "the keystone in the arch of the modern highway system that is being planned for Maryland," Governor Lane has said.

The 1947 State Legislature authorized a 100-million-dollar highway bond issue which provides for the cost of construction.

A Federal bill authorizing Maryland to build the shore link was passed by the U. S. Senate yesterday. It will be given quick attention in the House Public Works Committee, said Senators Tydings and O'Conor.

Governor Lane said last August that the crossing "is now on its way to reality," and that bids would be asked early this year. "I think we are going to be ready to start building it as soon as the frost is out of the ground next spring," Lane said in December.

Construction is not likely to start, however, for several months. R. E. Yienger, superintendent of the project for the Raymond Concrete Pile Co., said today that test borings may not be completed for two more months.

The object is to determine how far down bridge and tunnel piles must be sunk to reach bedrock. The borings will produce factual data on which Lane, an advisory board and the State roads commission will decide whether to build a bridge or a combined tunnel and bridge.

"We're going to build one or the other, whichever is cheapest to build and cheapest to operate," Lane has said.

Water Board Calls Viscose For Hearing

Richmond, Va., March 16 (AP).—The State Water Control Board has ordered the American Viscose Corp. of Front Royal, to appear before the board April 6 in the first hearing of its kind to be scheduled by the State agency.

The session has been called by the board to determine if a special order should be issued against the company to require it to neutralize and clarify all of its waste waters at all times, board records disclosed today.

Action by the board will come as one more step in a long controversy over pollution from the Viscose rayon plant.

The Winchester chapter of the Izaak Walton League last fall conducted an auction sale to obtain money for an advertising campaign against the industry. The sportsmen have charged that pollution from the plant has destroyed river bottom food for fish.

Records of the water control board show that a certificate was issued to American Viscose last October, authorizing the company to continue discharging its existing volume of waste. The company agreed voluntarily to neutralize its waste a minimum of 57 per cent of the time by operating a new treatment plant. For mechanical reasons, it was believed the plant could not operate continuously.

Hyattsville Man Ordered to Trial In North Carolina

Annapolis, Md., March 16 (Spl.). A Hyattsville man was one of three defendants ordered returned to Southern States today after extradition proceedings before Assistant Attorney General Joseph D. Buscher.

He is Aldace C. Brent, ordered sent to North Carolina to stand trial for nonsupport. Brent contended he had been ill and unable to support his minor children. Buscher remarked that Brent had been denied a divorce decree in 1946 and had never carried out the court order that he contribute to the keep of his children.

Others ordered extradited by Governor Lane were Dee Moore, jr., to North Carolina on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon, and Samuel Johnson, to Virginia, for trial on a charge of stealing three hogs.

Wodehouse Wins Appeal in U. S. Income Tax Case

Richmond, Va., March 16 (AP).—P. G. Wodehouse, British author and humorist, won his appeal in a Federal income tax case today.

The United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that Wodehouse will not have to pay Uncle Sam income tax on the sale of more than $120,000 worth of novels and magazine articles in this country in 1938 and 1941.

Its decision reversed the tax court of the United States in a split 2-to-1 decision. Its opinion noted that Congress has declared that the gains of nonresident aliens from such sales shall not be taxed.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue had determined tax deficiencies on sales of Wodehouse's works in the United States at $11,806.71 for 1938 and $1,854.85 for 1941.

Memorial Stamp Sale To Start in Frederick

By The Associated Press

Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.) announced yesterday that the Frederick (Md.) postoffice will handle exclusive first-day sale of a special Francis Scott Key commemorative stamp.

The first sale will be on August 9, the fiftieth anniversary of the unveiling of the Francis Scott Key Monument in Frederick. Frederick County was the birthplace of the Star Spangled Banner composer.

The Fishers Are Looking for a Good Place to Fish

Cora Fisher of 700 S. Arlington Mill dr., Arlington, Va., asks:

"Can you recommend some good fishing holes? My husband and I and some other Army officers and their wives, would like to learn of some nice fishing spots near here—places we could visit over the weekend. Can you help?

My fishing activities are confined to retrieving lost golf balls on water holes.

Can anybody help the Fishers and the would-be fishers?

LITTLE MAN, YOU'VE HAD A BUSY DAY

Stuart Armstrong of 8117 Park Crest dr., Silver Spring, Md., was handed a letter by his 8-year-old son Alan Wesley Armstrong the other night.

"What's this?" asked Pop.

"I got into some trouble at school today," said Alan Wesley with his chin resting on his chest. "Teacher said I should write you a letter and tell you about it."

The letter is herewith reproduced in its original form:

Dear Father:

This has been a very bad day in school today and this is the reason why:

This morning when we were having slides I had to stand in the back of the room because I was fighting and do you know why because he was calling me names and after that I was sent outside because I was talking to Donald Wood.

This afternoon I was bad because I was playing with Nina Baker and took a bite of her celery and she told the teacher.

After that I was being chased around the room. I bumped into the easel and knocked the new chart down.

I also took Nancy's chocolate bar and squeezed it.

Your son,
Alan Wesley Armstrong.

TREASURER'S REPORT

The never-ending stream of streetcar tokens for Children's Hospital still continues. And with the tokens come stories like this one, from Mrs. Charles H. Raksis of 1434 Saratoga ave. nw.:

"These two tokens turned up when we broke into the bank in which we were saving for our baby. He's now 7 weeks old and doing fine."

And this one, from a registered nurse:

"After paying my income tax, these tokens are all that's left. I might as well give them to the children and be broke. —V. L."

Tokens have also been received from: J. L. McKelligan, jr., 1426 21st st. nw.; Al Leghorn; the folks at 5140 MacArthur blvd. nw.; T. B.; Jean Lord, 1412 15th st. nw. (who has been collecting tokens from all her neighbors); Kristine Elizabeth Weaver, 7018 Hampden lane, Bethesda, Md., and Elizabeth W. Brien of 4836 Lee blvd., Arlington, Va.

NEW YORK.—Ira Gershwin appeared before Senator Tenney's Red probe committee, was asked only two questions, answered them fully and the committee excused him. When Gershwin was sworn in, Senator Tenney, who wrote "Mexicali Rose," asked him: "Are you related to that genius George Gershwin?" . . . "He was my brother," said Ira . . . "I have great admiration for his music," said Tenney, who—ignoring the fact that Ira's lyrics complemented George's music so perfectly that their output of song hits truly was a joint one—told his counsel: "Proceed with the questions" . . . Later that day Gershwin was asked what had happened at the committee hearings. He reported: "Tenney didn't like my lyrics."

Sir Thomas Beecham, the conductor, told some of his friends that his start in the concert field was as a pianist. He toured the concert halls of England, giving piano recitals. "And I was quite good at it," Beecham insisted . . . "Then why did you give it up?" he was asked . . . "Because I love to play cricket," Sir Thomas explained. "One day I played in an exciting match. I kept making wicket after wicket—in fact, I think I almost established a record. And that night, when I arrived at the concert hall and sat down to play, I couldn't move my fingers. They were stiff, because of the cricket game. So I gave up the piano."

Pleasant Thought

A pleasant thought can do so much . . . To brighten up the day . . . And fill with friendly atmosphere . . . Whatever words we say . . . It conquers wrath and prejudice . . . It lightens every care . . . And it is something everyone . . . Should have the grace to share . . . A pleasant thought is rich as gold . . . And yet is always free . . . And it provides by far the most . . . Enduring memory . . . It gives us inspiration in . . . Our struggle for success . . . And leads the way to dreams of love . . . And lasting happiness . . . The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Censorship in Japan Protested

By Drew Pearson

American newsmen in Japan, feeling there was little difference between Gen. MacArthur's news suppression and the iron curtain, recently sent a protest to the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

Pertinent Portions

Pertinent portions of it follow:

"At a conference with General MacArthur's public information officer, Mr. Frayne Baker, in October, 1946, Mr. Baker stated that any material that any occupation of theater official chooses to classify is protected by the rules of military security and that a correspondent can be court-martialed for publishing such material under the articles of war. Mr. Baker at that time agreed to prepare a statement of General MacArthur's policy concerning the status of correspondents to his headquarters. Despite repeated subsequent requests Allied corespondents in Japan have yet to receive these statements.

"The apparent intent of this device has been to withhold information of an economic, political and social character — information which we believe the readers of the Allied press are entitled to receive and which the representatives of the Allied press were sent to Japan to obtain.

"Commencing in October, 1946, every conversation between SCAP officials (Supreme Commander, Allied Powers) and Japanese authorities was classified as secret or higher. Thus correspondents who subsequently published or obtained such information, which obviously was in the possession of the 'enemy,' were under threat of prosecution.

"Commencing in July, 1946, discussion of any SCAP project which was "still in the works" was classified. The effect of this restriction was to curtail and if possible to prevent discussion of the thinking leading to important decisions in Governmental and economic fields, and to present the peoples of the Untied Nations with faits accomplis. This interpretation was substantiated by Mr. Frayne Baker, PIO, when he explained to correspondents: "From now on you will get your news of the occupation from PIO press releases."

Japanese Crime Censored

"In this manner, the shroud of security has been thrown over such subjects as Japanese crime, rationing statistics, dollar loan negotiations, the purges, economic decentralization, reparations, industrial rehabilitation plans and negotiations for wool and cotton imports. Even information concerning attempts by the Japanese to obstruct the occupation has been classified. Correspondents who have inquired into such attempts or who have published such information have been threatened frequently with investigation or prosecution for security violations.

"A correspondent who requested coal production statistics from the natural resources section reported that he was told that these figures were classified. Subsequently he secured the information from a Japanese publication. Later, Mr. Baker told correspondents that publication of the figures theoretically violated security regulations and that the correspondent conceivably could be court-martialed.

"A letter which General MacArthur sent to former Premier Shigeru Yoshida was transmitted to his publication by a correspondent before it had been made public through official channels. The correspondent was threatened with investigation.

"A correspondent who requested from the Army fiscal director's office information concerning supplies and property returned to the Japanese government was told that the information was 'secret.' These statistics were in the possession of the Japanese. The question therefore arises: From whom were occupation officials attempting to withhold such nonmilitary information?

"The fiscal director's office also refuses on grounds of security to divulge information concerning the deficit sustained by the Army during the first 10 months of the occupation when yen was convertible into dollars. The Army has reported to Congress the amount of the deficit, but refuses to reveal what measures are being employed to reduce this deficit. This secrecy has given rise to unhealthy conjecture among Army and occupation personnel. Again there is the question: Why and from whom is this information being withheld?

"A correspondent who reported a discussion concerning the economic purge was summoned by the deputy chief of staff, was required to listen to a reading of the articles of war and was informed that he had been called as a witness in an investigation of an 'information leak.' The correspondent reported that he was asked to divulge the source of his information with the implicit warning that he could be court-martialed under the articles of war for withholding such information. He said that he further was warned that he could not communicate with his employers nor divulge 'anything that has transpired in this room' and that he was not entitled to advice of legal counsel."

Newsman's Home Rifled

"Still another correspondent, who had written stories which occupation officials considered critical, revealed that his home had been raided by the Army's CID and that he—the correspondent—was subjected to interrogation and threats.

"Information supplied to a correspondent by one headquarters' section often is considered secret by another.

"For example, the government section actively encouraged correspondents to expose misappropriation of Japanese military supplies. G-1 and G-4, which had classified information relating to the matter, took exception to the resulting stories and efforts at reprisal were taken against at least one correspondent.

"Stories on the purge, including many facts supplied by G-2, diplomatic section and ESS, caused their authors to be branded personally by General MacArthur as among the 'most dangerous men in Japan.'

"Security in this theater has been further utilized as a pretext for seeking removal or exclusion from Japan of correspondents who have written stories considered critical by one or another official. Official letters are known to have been sent to the employers of at least nine correspondents, seeking to embarrass the correspondent in his relations with his employer and in a number of instances requesting removal of the correspondent.

"Conclusions: Various acts passed by Congress last year indicated the state of war with Japan was ended. Yet, the wartime concept of military security continues to prevail, and has been extended to embrace political, administrative, economic and cultural subjects totally unrelated to military security."
